

JANUARY 2003 POLITICAL SCIENCE CONFERENCE PARTICIPANTS' PROFILES

Truman Anderson, executive director of the Stuart Family Foundation, a private foundation based in Lake Forest, Illinois which supports public policy research. A former Marine Corps infantry officer, he holds a B.A. in History from the University of Illinois and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in International History from the University of Chicago. Prior to joining the Stuart Foundation, Dr. Anderson was a lecturer in the Department of International History at the London School of Economics. During his tenure with the foundation, he has inaugurated a major grant-making program for research on campaign finance reform.

Robert Benedict, associate professor of political science at the University of Utah. Many of Professor Benedict's scholarly writings have focused on the West, on environmental policy, and on the use of the initiative and referendum process. Other writings have focused on the role of political party activists in the western states. He has published in such journals as the Western Political Quarterly, Sloan Management Review, and Comparative Politics.

Michael Benson, president of Snow College. Before coming to Snow College, Dr. Benson served as a special assistant to the president at the University of Utah, and also as secretary to the university. In addition, Dr. Benson has been a consulting historian to the Harry S. Truman Presidential Library, an academic advisor and essayist at the Skirball Cultural Center in Los Angeles and has taught in the political science department at the University of Utah.

Matthew Burbank, associate professor of political science at the University of Utah. Professor Burbank's research interest is citizen participation in politics, examining the effect of information and citizen deliberation on individual attitudes on complex policy issues. He is the co-author of two books: Olympic Dreams: The Impact of Mega-events on Local Politics and Political Parties, Interest Groups, and Political Campaigns. Professor Burbank teaches courses on American politics, public opinion and elections, and research methods.

Tim Chambless, intern coordinator for the Hinckley Institute of Politics at the University of Utah. Dr. Chambless is an adjunct assistant professor of political science at the University of Utah. He is a member of the Salt Lake City Planning Commission and serves as the vice-president of Utah Affiliate of the ACLU. He recently wrote the chapter "Cold War in Politics in the American West," for the book Cold War West: 1945-1991. Professor Chambless teaches courses in American national government, practical politics, constitutional law, and mass communication law.

Anthony Corrado, chair of the Department of Government at Colby College. Professor Corrado is one of the nation's leading experts on campaign finance. He is co-author of numerous books and studies in this field, including the recent Campaigning in Cyberspace. He previously held senior positions in the Mondale, Dukakis and Kerrey presidential campaigns, and served on the White House Staff during the Carter Administration.

Rick Davis, managing partner of Davis Manafort. Mr. Davis is a recognized leader in international and national political affairs with over 20 years of experience in both foreign and domestic political and public affairs. Mr. Davis served Senator John S. McCain as his 2000 presidential campaign's National Campaign Manager and as Mr. Dole's Deputy Campaign Manager in 1996.

Randy Dryer, member of the litigation department at the law firm Parsons Behle & Latimer and Board of Trustee member of the University of Utah. Mr. Dryer has extensive expertise in media law and has represented virtually every major news organization in the state of Utah as well as many national news organizations. He has served as president of the Utah State Bar and chairman of the Utah Sports Authority, charged with developing the facilities for Salt Lake City to host the 2002 Winter Olympics.

Mark Glaze, associate legal counsel of the Campaign and Media Legal Center. Mr. Glaze has worked for several years as an attorney in media law at the New York firm Clifford Chance Rogers & Wells. He focused on First Amendment issues, including participation in the recent U.S. Supreme Court case Boy Scouts of America v. Dale, involving the First Amendment rights of speech and association. In addition to providing frequent legal counsel to Democratic candidates, Mr. Glaze also served on the legal team of Vice President Al Gore in Florida during the 2000 election recount controversy.

Larry Hansen, vice president of the Joyce Foundation in Chicago and former special assistant to U.S. Vice President Walter F. Mondale and U.S. Senator Adlai E. Stevenson. Prior to joining Joyce, Mr. Hansen served as a research professor at George Washington University's National Center for Communication Studies. He directed the university's Democracy Agenda Project, a series of forums that asked people in 19 Midwestern cities how they would reform the American political system. Mr. Hansen has consulted numerous public policy organizations and foundations, directed the Joyce Foundation's Elections program and in 1994, launched its Money and Politics program.

Paul Herrnson, director of the Center for American Politics and Citizenship and professor of government and politics at the University of Maryland. Dr. Herrnson is author of Congressional Elections: Campaigning at Home and in Washington and Party Campaigning in the 1980s. He teaches courses has served as an American Political Science Association Congressional Fellow and worked on numerous campaigns for state and federal office. Dr. Herrnson has advised Congress, the Federal Election Commission, the Maryland General Assembly, and the State of Maryland's Commission to Revise the Election Code on campaign finance, ballot access, and political parties.

Ronald Hrebenar, chair of Political Science Department at the University of Utah. Professor Hrebenar is the author, editor or co-editor of a dozen books, over 30 articles and chapters on the topics of interest groups, lobbying, political parties and elections in the United States and Japan. Professor Hrebenar regularly teaches classes on political parties and elections, interest groups and lobbying, Japanese politics, and elections and Asian government and Politics (East Asia).

Dan Jones, president and CEO of Dan Jones & Associates, Inc., a research and political polling firm. Mr. Jones is one of the foremost pollsters in Utah. Mr. Jones also serves as an adjunct professor of political science at the University of Utah. He was awarded Adjunct Professor of the Year in 2000. Mr. Jones currently serves on several boards and is the co-director of Huntsman Institute at the Hinckley Institute of Politics.

Kirk Jowers, director of academic affairs and deputy general counsel of the Campaign and Media Legal Center. Mr. Jowers is also a partner at Caplin & Drysdale, in the political activity practice. For the past several years, Mr. Jowers has worked exclusively in the campaign finance, election law, and government ethics arena. Mr. Jowers has served as the Deputy General Counsel for the Advisory Commission on Electronic Commerce and as General Counsel of the Washington, D.C. Republican Party. He also provided legal counsel to George W. Bush's 2000 presidential campaign on Electoral College issues and in Broward County, Florida during the 2000 election recount controversy.

Rod Julander, professor of Political Science at Weber State University. Professor Weber teaches classes in Political Theory, Public Administration, American Government and Electoral Politics at Weber State. He has won the Cortez honors award, the Crystal Crest Master Teacher Award, and the Dello Dayton Teaching Award. In addition to teaching, Professor Julander is also chair of the Utah Board of Family Services, Member of the Utah State Senate, Legislative Representative for the National Association of Social Workers (Utah chapter), and vice chair of the Utah Democratic party.

J. Bernard Machen, thirteenth president of the University of Utah. Prior to his appointment at Utah, President Machen was provost and executive vice president for academic affairs at the University of Michigan and served as dean of the University of Michigan School of Dentistry. President Machen has also served as president of the American Association of Dental Schools and as a member of the National Academy of Science's Institute of Medicine Committee on the Future of Dental Education.

David Magleby, dean of the College of Family, Home and Social Sciences, distinguished professor of political science and director of the Center for the Study of Elections and Democracy at Brigham Young University. Dean Magleby is the principal investigator in a series of studies on soft money and issue advocacy in general elections. His publications include The Money Chase: Congressional Campaign Finance Reform, Outside Money, and most recently, the Financing of the 2000 Elections.

Thomas Mann, Senior Fellow, Governance Studies, the W. Averell Harriman Chair at the Brookings Institution. Mr. Mann is an expert on campaign finance and governance and is the former executive director of the American Political Science Association. His books include: Vital Statistics on Congress, 2001-2002, The Permanent Campaign and its Future, and Campaign Finance Reform: a Sourcebook.

Scott Matheson, dean and professor of law at the University of Utah. Dean Matheson joined the faculty in 1985 and was associate dean for academic affairs from 1990 to 1993. He has also served as the U. S. Attorney for the District of Utah. Dean Matheson has taught courses in civil procedure, constitutional law, evidence, and media law, and has published in the areas of civil procedure and constitutional law.

Courtney McBeth, project coordinator for the Campaign and Media Studies Program and Olympic Aid at the Hinckley Institute of Politics at the University of Utah. Mrs. McBeth has also served as a presidential intern for President Bernie Machen. A 3rd Team All-American, Mrs. McBeth recently finished her senior year playing for the University of Utah Women's Soccer Team. She graduated magna cum laude with a B.A. in Political Science from the University of Utah, and is currently pursuing her Master's of Education.

Senator John McCain (R-AZ), third-term Senator representing the state of Arizona. Senator McCain is Ranking Member of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation, and has become a recognized leader in campaign finance reform, telecommunications, and aviation issues. He has also become one of Congress' most respected voices for a strong national defense, sound foreign policy, and one of the leading defenders of the rights of Native Americans. Senator McCain has received numerous awards for his distinguished public service and leadership - in 1997, he was named one of the "25 Most Influential People in America" by Time magazine.

Clay Mulford, partner in the Dallas office of Hughes & Luce, LLP. In addition to his practice, Mr. Mulford has also served as a Fellow of the Institute of Politics at Harvard and taught at the Kennedy School of Government. In 1992, he was general counsel and campaign chairman of Ross Perot's presidential campaign, and in 1996 was general counsel to the Reform Party and a senior advisor and general counsel to Perot '96. Mr. Mulford has served on the Coalition for Justice - the national select committee of the American Bar Association (ABA) to reform the justice system, the ABA National Advisory Committee on Election Law, and the ABA Standing Committee on Election Law.

Jayne Nelson, program manager of the Hinckley Institute of Politics at the University of Utah. The Institute is dedicated to teaching respect for practical politics and the principle of citizen involvement in government. Mrs. Nelson coordinates the "Coffee & Politics" program featuring local, national and international guests. Mrs. Nelson also produces the Institutes newsletter, administers the scholarship awards and conducts seminars for the interns in Washington, D.C.

Norm Ornstein, resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute. Mr. Ornstein also serves as an election analyst for CBS News, writes regularly for USA Today as a member of its Board of Contributors, and writes a column called "Congress Inside Out" for Roll Call newspaper. He has also served as co-chair of the President's Advisory Committee on the Public Interest Obligations of Digital Television Broadcasters. Mr. Ornstein is the author of several books, including most recently The Permanent Campaign and Its Future, co-written with Thomas E. Mann.

J. Steven Ott, dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Science at the University of Utah. Before becoming dean, he directed the Masters of Public Administration program at the University of Utah. Dean Ott has published widely in the areas of administrative theory, nonprofit organizations, human resource management, organization theory, organizational behavior, and organizational culture. He has twenty years of experience as a consultant to numerous local and state governments and nonprofit organizations across the Midwest and Rocky Mountain states.

Kelly Patterson, associate professor and chair of the Department of Political Science at Brigham Young University. Professor Patterson teaches and does research in the areas of American politics, public opinion and elections, and political parties. He is the author of Political Parties and the Maintenance of Liberal Democracy. This past year he served as Director of the Utah Colleges Exit Poll, a statewide exit poll staffed by students from colleges and universities from around the state of Utah.

Congressman Thomas Petri (R-WI), Twelve-term Congressman representing Wisconsin's 6th Congressional District. Congressman Petri is vice chairman of the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee where he is also Chairman of the Highways and Transit Subcommittee. He is also vice chairman of the Education and the Workforce Committee. Important Petri legislative initiatives have included those in the areas of student loan reform, the allocation of money for federal highway spending, cost-sharing for federal water projects, tax and welfare reform, banking reform, campaign reform, and health care reform.

Trevor Potter, chair and general counsel of the Campaign and Media Legal Center. Mr. Potter is a former Commissioner and Chairman of the Federal Election Commission, and has specialized in the area of campaign finance and election law for the last 15 years. He served as General Counsel of the McCain campaign for President in 2000. Mr. Potter is the editor of the "Campaign Finance Law" website at the Brookings Institution, where he is a nonresident Senior Fellow. He is also currently a Member of the D.C. law firm Caplin & Drysdale, where he heads its political activities practice.

Hector J. Preciado, campaign finance reform fellow at the Greenlining Institute, a non-profit, public policy and advocacy think tank whose mission is to empower low income and minority communities through economic and leadership development, civil rights and anti-redlining activities. Mr. Preciado is a graduate of Pomona College, in Claremont.

Glen Shor, associate legal counsel of the Campaign and Media Legal Center. Mr. Shor is a former Deputy Chief of Staff and Legislative Director to U.S. Representative Martin T. Meehan (D-MA), one of the four principal sponsors of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002. During his four-and-a-half year tenure with Congressman Meehan, Mr. Shor was integrally involved in the successful effort to pass the McCain-Feingold-Shays-Meehan campaign finance overhaul bill, as well as the passage of legislation to require former "stealth 527 PACs" to disclose their contributors and expenditures.

Robert Stern, president of the Center for Governmental Studies. He has served as General Counsel of the Center since its founding in 1983. He has co-authored a number of Center reports in the areas of campaign financing, the initiative process, and electronic filing of disclosure statements. Before joining the Center, he was General Counsel of the California Fair Political Practices Commission for nine years. He has authored a number of statewide initiatives enacted by California voters, including the Political Reform Act of 1974.

Nancy E. Tate, executive director of the League of Women Voters of the United States and the League of Women Voters Education Fund. The League is a nonpartisan political organization that encourages the informed and active participation of citizens in government and works to increase understanding of major public policy issues through education and advocacy. Ms. Tate also served for six years as the Chief Operating Officer of the National Academy of Public Administration. Ms. Tate also had a career in the federal government in the Energy and Education Departments, and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Paul Taylor, founder and director of the Alliance for Better Campaigns. Mr. Taylor was a newspaper reporter for 25 years, spending 14 years at The Washington Post covering national politics and social issues. For the last four years at the Post Mr. Taylor served as bureau chief in South Africa. He left the Post after the 1996 election to start the Alliance for Better Campaigns, with Presidents Ford and Carter and Walter Cronkite as honorary co-chairs.

Sean Treglia, program officer in the Public Policy program at the Pew Charitable Trusts. Mr. Treglia is responsible for the Improving Elections Program at the Trusts, encompassing campaign finance reform, campaign conduct, and media reform including funding efforts to explore the public interest dimensions of the Internet and emerging digital technologies. Mr. Treglia has consulted or held staff positions on local, state, congressional and presidential campaigns and is an attorney by training.

Paul Turner, senior program manager for The Greenlining Institute. Mr. Turner is the Director of Greenlining's Claiming Our Democracy Program, a pro-democracy initiative to engage minority and low-income communities in the debate for campaign finance reform as a civil rights issue. He is also the Managing Director of the California Partnership for Economic Achievement, a partnership between The Greenlining Institute and Merrill Lynch to invest $159 million in California's ethnically diverse communities to expand small business development, affordable housing and financial opportunities. In addition, Mr. Turner leads Greenlining's efforts to defeat the latest round of anti-affirmative action ballot initiatives in California.

Marianne Viray, managing director and head of research at the Campaign and Media Legal Center. Mrs. Viray has worked in non-profits and conducted academic research on money and politics for the past four years and is the author of published works on soft money, interest group activity, and the federal government's mandate in election administration. She has worked at the Center for Public Integrity investigating so-called "stealth PACs" during the 2000 elections and monitored interest group activity with Dr. David Magleby during the 1998 elections. Mrs. Viray has also trained journalists nationwide on campaign coverage and interest group and political party activity in elections.

Fred Wertheimer, founder, president and CEO of Democracy 21 and its Education Fund. Mr. Wertheimer previously was President of Common Cause, the nonpartisan citizens' lobbying organization. He has also served as a Fellow at the Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy at Harvard University; as the J. Skelly Wright Fellow at Yale Law School; and as a political analyst for CBS News, ABC News and ABC's Nightline. Wertheimer is a longtime leader in the fight for campaign finance reform and a national spokesman on such issues as money in politics, government accountability, and political reform.

Ted Wilson, director of the Hinckley Institute of Politics at the University of Utah. Mr. Wilson is also an adjunct associate professor of political science and former Mayor of Salt Lake City. Mr. Wilson also ran as the Democratic candidate for gubernatorial office in 1988. Mr. Wilson also serves on many local boards including the Intermountain Health Care Board, the Utah Air Travel Commission, and the University of Utah Alumni Board.

