Director's Message

Having 20/20 vision means your eyesight is sharp and you can see at a distance clearly. The academic year started with great anticipation as the Hinckley Institute of Politics was starting to see the results of our vision for 2020. A record number of students engaged in our classes, forums, and internship programs. Our team successfully hosted the 31st Huntsman Seminar in Constitutional Government for Teachers, engaged with hundreds of youth in the Define Your Path program to encourage civic participation, and empowered women to run for office through the Real Women Run initiative. We produced 35 weekly episodes of The Hinckley Report and began preparing campus to host the nation's only vice-presidential debate.

As we entered 2020 and commemorated the 55th anniversary of Hinckley Institute of Politics, our resiliency as an institution and as individuals faced its most challenging test in recent memory and we had to sharpen our focus and make adjustments.

"No matter where one stands on the political spectrum, our world continues to need good solutions, sound policy, and talented individuals to take up the cause."

I was with our legislative interns on Capitol Hill as we learned about the measures the state would be taking to stem the spread of coronavirus. The typical exciting conclusion of the 45-day legislative session in March was instead met with uncertainty and anxiety.

As COVID-19 rapidly spread around the world, our Hinckley students and programs adjusted. Our students felt disheartened when they had to return home from once-in-a-lifetime internships, but they swiftly adapted, switching to remote work and online learning. They met these rapid changes and unforeseen challenges with determination and professionalism. As our students adapted, we did too, making the Hinckley and its programs more accessible than ever before.

I am particularly proud of the rapid overhaul our staff did to host the 6th annual HIPtalks competition, a 2-minute speech contest which awards $10,000 in scholarships. Weeks before the competition was scheduled to occur, we transitioned to holding the event entirely online. In the face of all the uncertainty in the world, it was inspiring to hear the passionate voices of the students on our campus. Our students are resilient and strong.

We take seriously Robert H. Hinckley's goal to "teach students respect for practical politics and the principle of citizen involvement in government." Though it has been 55 years since its inception, the original mission and values of the Hinckley Institute remain just as relevant. No matter where one stands on the political spectrum, our world continues to need good solutions, sound policy, and talented individuals to take up the cause. The education our students receive at the Hinckley gives them the tools they need to be engaged citizens.

I can think of no better way to honor the Hinckley Institute's 55th anniversary than to recognize the vision of the incredible students, alumni, and team that have helped create the Institute and those who strive to ensure its future success.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR ALL

LOCAL

MANAGING DIRECTOR MORGAN LYON COTTI, PHD:

"The local internship program continues to expand and provide students with professional experiences in a range of government offices, nonprofits, and businesses across the Wasatch Front. As this program has grown, so has its alumni base. One of the most gratifying things that happens at the Hinckley Institute is when former interns contact us because they need to hire an intern and the Hinckley Institute was the first place they called. Hinckley alumni serve as wonderful mentors for our students because they know how transformative a substantive internship can be. Moving forward, we are excited to continue to expand our host offices and internship offerings so that anyone from an incoming freshman to an experienced graduate student can find an internship that will set them on the path to a successful career."

LEGISLATIVE MANAGING DIRECTOR MORGAN LYON COTTI, PHD:

"For more than 50 years, the Hinckley Institute has sent some of the brightest students to work as full-time, paid interns for members of the Utah State Legislature. In 2020, the Hinckley Institute placed 29 students with legislators, lobbyists, advocacy groups, and other elected officials. These students saw firsthand how elected officials and policy makers had to make quick and decisive action as the public health and economic crises caused by the Coronavirus pandemic developed during the legislative session. Legislative interns from all universities and colleges were prepared to assist their legislators through this historic session because they were trained together in a consortium course that is co-led by the Hinckley Institute."

NATIONAL MANAGING DIRECTOR GINA SHIPLEY, MPA:

"The Hinckley Institute has one of the nation's longest standing, Washington, DC internship programs – dating back to 1965. Each semester the Hinckley Institute provides 30 students of all majors internships in a variety of government institutions, public advocacy groups, and media and consulting firms. This flagship program provides students internship scholarships to cover expenses and subsidized housing in central Washington, DC apartments. The success of this program is made evident by the growing number of Hinckley alumni living and working in the DC area. More often than not, these alumni have accepted job opportunities that were a direct result of their Hinckley internships. The annual DC alumni event is a highlight, as we reconnect with past interns. We see the impact their internships had on their lives and hear about recent accomplishments. In the future, we anticipate the national internship program growing to the capacity to house and provide substantive full-time internships to 40 students per semester."

GLOBALMANAGING DIRECTOR JEAN OH, M.ED.:

"Flexibility is an essential quality in a global intern navigating professional expectations in a foreign context. This past year, and particularly this spring, tested the flexibility of our global interns as well as their host offices, as they worked through the challenges of COVID-19 that hit the world early in 2020. Unsurprisingly, yet nevertheless remarkably, global interns and their host offices rose to meet the challenges with flexibility, a calm demeanor and a consistently helpful attitude to make things as easy as possible for others. The Hinckley Institute's 55 year history of promoting experiential learning through deeply engaged civic service in communities both near and far has cultivated an ethos of more than 'rolling with the punches.' It's an overall mentality and commitment to find creative ways to serve, even, or especially, in the face of a global pandemic. To that end, global interns are finding ways to remain globally active, remotely and safely until global travel is once again welcome across all borders."

HUNTSMAN

The Huntsman Seminar in Constitutional Government for Teachers is sponsored by the Jon and Karen Huntsman Foundation and aims to improve the quality of civic education in Utah schools and empower educators to engage in the political process. The seminar is facilitated by Director Jason Perry and Associate Director Morgan Lyon Cotti and produced by Managing Director of Community Outreach Molly Wheeler. Together, they provide participants with a unique opportunity to gain an in-depth understanding of political issues while earning graduate credit. In 2019, 31 teachers from every corner of Utah attended the seminar which focused on topics including the impacts of Utah's changing demography, innovations in the Utah court system, and how to enable their students to participate in the political process.

UEDC

The Utah Education Debate Coalition (UEDC) coordinates primary and general election debates for State School Board candidates. Morgan Lyon Cotti represents the Hinckley Institute on the board which also includes the Utah Association of Charter Schools, the United Way of Salt Lake, the Deseret News, and the Sutherland Institute. In 2020, the UEDC adjusted the debates, which are usually held in school auditoriums, and coordinated four primary debates which streamed live via YouTube.

RWR

Real Women Run (RWR) is a collaborative nonpartisan initiative to empower women to participate fully in public life and civic leadership through elected political office at all levels, appointments to boards and commissions, participation in campaigns, and engagement in the political system. Morgan Lyon Cotti has served on the board of Real Women Run since 2014 and co-chaired the spring training each year, hosting it at the Hinckley Institute. This year, the spring training, which seeks to provide the hard skills candidates need to run successful campaigns, was held remotely and featured local and national experts. Real Women Run has also expanded throughout the state to provide campaign training and services to all interested candidates.

Utah

UDC

(UDC) Commission consortium of higher educational institutions media organizations, and business and civic leaders dedicated to creating a nonpartisan and independent system of debates among qualified candidates for statewide and federal offices in Utah during each election cycle. The Hinckley Institute has been an integral part of the commission since its founding. In addition to her position as a board member, Morgan Lyon Cotti is serving on the executive board this year. In 2020, the UDC will host a record six primary debates, six general election debates, and play a key role in the planning and implementation of the vice presidential debate.

AGF

The Andrew Goodman Foundation is committed to establishing a legacy of courageous civic action to grow new leaders of change and to build a culture of participation. democratic At the University of Utah, student ambassadors for AGF work with Administrative Program Coordinator Kyle Tucker and Hinckley Institute staff to promote voting and civic engagement all across campus. Through participation in the Vote Everywhere program of AGF, the University of Utah has established its commitment to being a state and national leader in elevating the voices of young people and educating a new generation of civically-minded individuals.

PATHS

In partnership with the Office of Engagement and the Office of Continuing Education and Community Engagement, the Hinckley Institute is dedicated to teaching youth about the importance of civic engagement as part of the Define Your Path program and the PATHS program, respectively. These initiatives bring students from schools around the Salt Lake Valley for university programming on campus to get a glimpse of what college is like. Outreach Coordinator Miranda Best, creates these presentations and trains the Hinckley Student Ambassadors to facilitate discussions. These presentations empower young students to become knowledgeable about current issues and civically engaged. The program aspires to teach them that no matter their age, economic background, documentation status, they can create change in their communities. Despite 2019-2020 academic year being cut short, we were still able to work with over 120 young students.

POLITICAL ENGAGEMENT

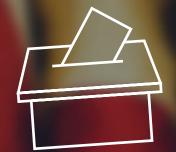

■ he Hinckley Institute is committed to increasing student's voter registration and participation. Working with the Andrew Goodman Foundation's (AGF) student ambassadors and the Associated Students of the Universitt of Utah's (ASUU) Government Relations Board, the Hinckley Institute has helped thousands of students register to vote and gain easy access to the ballot box with an on-campus polling location at the Marriott Library.

One of the year's biggest events took place on National Voter Registration Day (September 22nd). AGF and ASUU conducted voter registration drives in the Marriott Library plaza to help students register to vote in time for the 2019 municipal elections. In addition to in-person voter registration, AGF worked with the Office of the Registrar to make online voter registration widely available for University of Utah students. These efforts led to more than 450 students registering to

In the past, the Hinckley Institute, AGF, and ASUU have worked closely with the Salt Lake County Clerk to provide a vote center at the Marriott Library during federal election years. This year, we expanded that partnership to include the first campus vote center for municipal elections and for the Super Tuesday presidential primary. Students turned out by the hundreds to cast their ballots on campus.

o celebrate the Democratic presidential primary on Super Tuesday, the Hinckley Institute, Andrew Goodman Foundation, Political Science Department, and College of Social and Behavioral Science co-hosted an election night panel and watch party. Students, faculty, and community members filled the Hinckley Caucus Room to hear election analysis from an expert panel consisting of Political Science

Associate Professor Jim Curry, The Salt Lake Tribune Columnist Robert Gherke, Hinckley Institute Associate Director Morgan Lyon Cotti, and Utah Democratic Party Executive Director Matthew Patterson. After the panel, quests enjoyed food, and election-related games as they watched the live results roll-in.

he Hinckley Institute hosted some big names in politics as candidates visited campus to connect with students. Presidential Candidate and Hawaii Congresswoman Tulsi Gabbard discussed her vision for America. Gubernatorial Candidates Spencer Cox and Jon Huntsman shared their experiences in elected office and explored Utah's potential in the years ahead.

s a part of the University of Utah's annual Pride Week, the Hinckley Institute partnered with the LGBT Resource Center and several other campus partners to host a Mayoral Candidate Town Hall. State Senator Luz Escamilla and then-Councilwoman Erin Mendenhall discussed policy issues as they relate to the LGBTQ+ communities and answered audience questions.

n October 7, 2020, the eyes of the country will be fixed on the University of Utah campus as we host the nation's only vice presidential debate for the 2020 election cycle.

Led by the University and the Utah Debate Commission, the massive undertaking will transform campus in the fall of 2020, providing students with a truly once-in-alifetime opportunity to participate in the national political scene as it unfolds on Presidents Circle.

Affairs Office, the Hinckley Institute is designing the campuswide experience by coordinating student internship and volunteer opportunities, developing course curriculum, and organizing watch parties.

The effort to host this high-profile event was years in the making. The University of Utah was one of four sites selected by the Commission on Presidential Debates through a highly competitive bidding process.

In partnership with the Academic The Commission is a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization and has sponsored all general election presidential and vice presidential debates since 1988. This is the first national debate to be hosted in the state and the Hinckley is excited to help ensure it is a success.

PARTICIPATION RECOGNITION

HARVARD NATIONAL CAMPAIGN CONFERENCE

Each year, the Harvard Institute of Politics welcomes students from more than 35 colleges and universities across the country to the National Campaign for Political and Civic Engagement. This year, University of Utah students Sheely Edwards and Sierra McNeil were honored to attend. Over the course of the weekend, participants meet young leaders, and discuss pertinent political issues. The goal is to motivate students to increase civic engagement on their own campuses and communities. This year's conference focused on breaking down barriers to democracy. The event culminated with a trip to New Hampshire where the students saw firsthard how primary campaigns operate and were given the chance to canvass for a campaign.

"The Harvard National Campaign Conference was one of the most inspiring and insightful opportunities I've had during my college education. I had such a fantastic time meeting engaged students from around the country and learning from their unique perspectives on civic participation."

- Sheely Edwards

OXFORD CONSORTIUM FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

The Oxford Consortium gives students who are passionate about human rights an opportunity to engage with fellow peers, colleagues, scholars, and professionals to learn and envision ways that they might contribute to the global task of combating human rights violations. 2019's summer consortium focused on global ethics, using the concept as a framework for discussion of humanitarian action, conflict, human rights law, and peacemaking. The Hinckley Institute sponsored Claire Kirkland's attendance. Kirkland has participated in a local, Washington, DC, and global internship.

"The Oxford Consortium gave me a new perspective on not just refugee and immigration issues, but other fascinating areas like European politics and environmental policy. Attending the Consortium motivated me to become an advocate for refugees and work to support them. I recently accepted a position with the International Rescue Committee of Utah, and I am certain that everything I learned at the Consortium will inform and inspire the work I do in this role."

- Claire Kirkland

TRUMAN SCHOLARSHIP

University of Utah student and Hinckley Institute intern, Elise Scott was awarded the 2020 Harry S. Truman Scholarship for the state of Utah. A political science and communication double major, one of the highlights of Elise's undergraduate education has been participating in a Hinckley internship with Utah's Legislature. She is also the opinion editor at the University of Utah's paper, The Daily Utah Chronicle, where her writing has won multiple awards. She is also a volunteer with UServeUtah, Salt Lake Peer Court, and local political campaigns. Scott plans to use her scholarship money to attend law school. She is passionate about the defense of civil rights and the mitigation of hate-based violence.

The Truman Scholarship was created as a living memorial to President Truman and seeks to motivate bright, outstanding students who are pursuing a life of public service with up to $30,000 for graduate study. Past winners include supreme court justices, U.S. senators and congressmen, governors, ambassadors, and other elected officials and community leaders. Truman Scholars lead at all levels of government and throughout the nonprofit sector, from local to global. Recipients must demonstrate outstanding leadership potential and communication skills, demonstrate academic excellence, and be committed to careers in public service. Scholars also receive priority admission and supplemental financial aid at some premier graduate institutions, leadership training, career and graduate school counseling, and special internship opportunities within the federal government.

FULBRIGHT U.S. STUDENT PROGRAM

This year, University of Utah student Caitlin Silianoff was one of the competitive students chosen to receive a program grant. Caitlin has participated in two local Hinckley internships. As a Fulbright scholar, she will serve as an English teaching assistant in Taiwan. She will receive a B.A. in English and International Studies and a B.S. in Political Science with a minor in Chinese from the University of Utah.

The Fulbright U.S. Student Program is an international educational exchange program designed to build relationships between people in the U.S. and in other countries with the aim of solving global challenges. It is funded through an annual appropriation made by the U.S. Congress to the U.S. Department of State. Grant recipients are selected based on academic and professional achievement as well as a record of service and demonstrated leadership in their respective fields.

HINDSIGHT IS 2020

A LOOK BACK AT THE LAST DECADE

Interns, Interns, Interns!

Over the last decade, the Hinckley Institute connected over 3,000 interns with transformative, resumé-building experiences. In ten years, we have almost doubled our number of interns, with over 8,000 total. We also worked hard to grow host-office partnerships to ensure that students from all ma-

From their origin as "Coffee and Politics" and "Books and Banter," to today's "Pizza and Politics," the Hinckley Institute prioritizes bringing political thought and informed perspectives to the university campus. Approximately 80 forums are held throughout the fall and spring semesters featuring local, national, and global activists, academics, lawmakers, journalists, and political leaders. Over this past decade, forum guests have included Dolores Huerta, Karl Rove, Susi Snyder, Jon Huntsman Jr., Mitt Romney, and Bassem Youssef.

A Building for the Future

After 60-plus years as the main class-room building on campus, Orson Spencer Hall was replaced by the Carolyn and Kem Gardner Commons which officially opened in 2018. It is home to the College of Social and Behavioral Science, the School for Cultural and Social Transformation, the Office for Global Engagement, the Welcome and Student Success Centers, and the Hinckley Institute! Our new offices provide beautiful conference and study spaces as well as a caucus room, which lets us host events and bring in notable speakers.

New Director Carries Insitute's Vision Forward

The Hinckley Institute was excited to welcome Jason P. Perry as our director in 2015. Jason also serves as the vice president for government relations at the University of Utah. Prior to his tenure at the U, he served as chief of staff to Governor Gary R. Herbert as well as the executive director of the Governor's Office of Economic Development under Governor Jon Huntsman Jr. As director, Jason is wholly dedicated to serving the student population at the University of Utah and ensuring that each intern has a transformative experience.

A Lecture Series Rich in Intellect

The Sam Rich Lecture Series highlights exceptional, thought-provoking individuals with the mission to engage and inspire students. In 2013, the inaugural guest was celebrated author and journalist Malcolm Gladwell. His books include Outliers and Blink. 2015 welcomed Michael Lewis, financial journalist and bestselling non-fiction author of titles including The Big Short and Moneyball. Most recently, 2017's lecture guest was Bob Woodward the investigative journalist and author of Fear and All the President's Men.

Access for All Students

One of the Hinckley Institute's goals is to ensure that students have access to internships regardless of economic advantages. We are proud to offer scholarship assistance to all of our internship programs as well as academic scholarships. Over the last 10 years, we have provided over $2.3 million in scholarships, enabling students to participate in everything from traveling abroad for global internships to offsetting housing costs in DC. We are so grateful to the generous donors who make this funding possible.

Looking at Local Politics

Another exciting development over the last decade is the addition of our Emmy nominated PBS television show, The Hinckley Report. With Jason Perry as the host, the show provides insight and analysis into Utah politics with journalists, lawmakers, and policy experts. The show just completed its fourth season and was able to nimbly transition to video conferencing in lieu of the usual studio set in response to COVID-19 concerns. The show is produced by Morgan Lyon Cotti and Natalie Tippets, with art direction by Brooke Doner, and in partnership with PBS Utah.

Spring semester 2020 brought unique challenges to our interns as they navigated COVID-19 concerns. For many, this meant their internships ended early and they returned home. However, an impressive number of host offices and interns figured out ways to adapt the interns' roles — allowing the interns to contribute remotely. Even students who were supposed to be on global internships working for companies thousands of miles away found ways to stay connected and maintain meaningful roles with their host offices. The Hinckley team was impressed by our interns' nimble evolution.

NICOLE GEHRING, NATIONAL INTERN
DEPT. OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, WASHINGTON, DC

"Working remotely was not something I am accustomed to or expected from my time in Washington, DC. This experience taught me many things about my own work ethic and ability to adapt to a rapidly changing environment. The first few days flew by, but as days turned into weeks I found myself relying on my team and the communication that we all had established so early on to create the driving force in the goals I had set for myself since the very beginning. This experience has and will forever change the way I see what the working world has to offer and the complex challenges people face in times of adversity. Each day presents its own unique challenges with many unknowns, but I am incredibly grateful to Hinckley and HHS for instilling in their interns the courage to believe in themselves no matter what life brings."

AUSTIN DECKARD, GLOBAL INTERN STARTUPBOOTCAMP, MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA

"My experience as an intern at Startupbootcamp was nothinshort of incredible. I had the opportunity to work alongsid brilliant people from around the world who are using renewabl energy to address some of the world's most pressing challenges. When I returned to the states and began working remotely although there is an 18 hour time difference between Salt Lak and Melbourne, it wasn't difficult to keep in touch with m

JACK JOWERS, LOCAL INTERN
THE SALT LAKE TRIBUNE, SALT LAKE CITY, UT

"Working from home definitely shortened my commute to work as I converted my bedroom dresser into a makeshift desk. Working with The Salt Lake Tribune's business innovation team, I helped organize a strategic plan and create a dashboard to track key performance indicators for the newly transitioned nonprofit news organization. I've also assisted in researching and writing applications for various grants. The COVID-19 outbreak was a busy time for the newsroom, and I was able to prepare messages emphasizing the importance of strong local journalism during times of crisis to share with potential donors and the public."

MADISON BARKER, GLOBAL INTERN ONE YOUNG WORLD, LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM

"Almost half of my internship was conducted working a home instead of in London. My manager and team wer incredibly helpful and made the transition relatively easy I would video call with the whole team every day at 10:00 AM (5:30 pm London time) to discuss daily progress and update them on my ongoing project. My primary focus for my time working remotely was to create content for the website, which included articles about how the One Young World Community is responding to the coronavirus."

PAIGE REMINGTON, NATIONAL INTERN
DEPT. OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, WASHINGTON, DC

"After interning with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for two months, we, as interns, were notified that we would be working from home for the foreseeable future and most likely wouldn't be returning to the office before heading back to Utah. Transitioning from working full-time in the middle of Washington, DC to my apartment was a definite adjustment, but one that came with plenty of learning opportunities. I was able to strengthen my time and change management skills. Although this was not how I saw my last semester at the University of Utah playing out, I am very grateful I was able to live in the nation's capital and then also to continue interning for HHS while adapting to a dynamic environment."

ABIGAIL BARNEY, GLOBAL INTERN AUSTRALIAN PARLIAMENT, MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA

We paused on all the projects we were working on (i.e., rug reform and elective surgery waitlist reform) and hifted to monitoring the government's response to the irus. From Hinckley Intern to the Utah Supreme Court "The Hinckley Institute helped me discover the right path for me."

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT:

JUSTICE PAIGE PETERSEN

Over the last 25 years, Justice Paige Petersen's career accomplishments have created a formidable and impressive resumé. She has pursued her judicial career down a variety of compelling avenues and international locations. While her trajectory has taken her around the world, the Hinckley Institute was her launchpad into public service.

After completing her associate's degree at the College of Eastern Utah, Petersen enrolled at the University of Utah and quickly took advantage of the opportunities offered by the Hinckley Institute. Petersen completed her first internship during the 1992 General Legislative Session where she worked with Senator Scott Howell. Looking back at her experience Petersen said, "I loved the energy of the last night of the legislative session," when the 45 days culminated in one final rush to pass legislation.

Senator Howell would later recall, "It didn't take me long to realize that Paige was the brightest, the most dynamic, and dedicated intern that I had ever had the privilege of working with. I knew that with her skills and abilities that Paige was going to achieve much in her future career. It has been a pleasure to watch Paige over the years to see the amazing accomplishments that she has achieved."

Petersen served a second internship, this time working in the White House. Petersen remembers, "It was almost surreal to walk through the West Wing of the White House. My office was in the Old Executive Office Building (which I loved), but I had access to the West Wing as well. It was very meaningful to be there, and realize it's not just a place on TV or in the movies, but a real place. And I was there." Beyond her work, she said "I made wonderful friends from my intern class and we traveled a lot!" Together, they took advantage of Washington, DC's central location and traveled as much as possible — from Virginia to Pennsylvania to New York.

During her junior year, Petersen won the prestigious Scott M. Matheson Leadership Award. Professor Mark Matheson helps administer this scholarship and remembers the day Petersen was selected, "I had a conversation with Mayor Ted Wilson, who was then the director of the Hinckley, in which we struggled to find words to do justice to Paige's abilities. This didn't happen often to Ted and me!" Professor Matheson also taught Petersen and said, "Paige enriched the educational experience of all of us who were lucky enough to know her. Through her wonderful intelligence and remarkable poise, she brought a genuine vitality to the culture of learning on this campus. In those years Paige was already manifesting her deep gifts for creating justice and coherence in the human community."

When asked how the Hinckley Institute has impacted her life, Justice Petersen answered, "I loved every day of both of my internships. And on campus, the Hinckley Institute was my home base. I appreciated the speakers, the resources and support, and the camaraderie with other students. My engagement with the Hinckley Institute deepened my desire to have a career in public service. And that desire has stuck with me. After a couple of years working at a private law firm, I've spent my career as a federal prosecutor, a war crimes prosecutor, and now in the Utah State judiciary."

Leadership Forum Scholarship Awarded

Paige Petersen

Paige Petersen received a $3500 Scott M. Matheson Leadership Forum Scholarship. Petersen, a senior in political science

Petersen, a senior in political science and English, transferred to the U. from the College of Eastern Utah. She was an intern for state Senator Scott Howell during the 1992 legislative session, and did another local internship with Karen Shephard's campaign.

Petersen has also been chairperson for the Hinckley Institute's SAC, and will be on the Associated Students of the University of Utah Government Affairs

Board this coming year.

Her experiences have had many benefits, Petersen says.

"The main benefit for me was, when you get a practical knowledge of what you've been learning in your classes, it finally sinks in, and you really understand what you learned.

"Also, before I interned at the legislature I thought there's no way I'd ever want to run for any office. I think I had a cynical view of public officials. And then when I actually got involved I saw that they were real people and that they really tried to help people. I thought, I could do this and could really help some people if [I] came at this with the right values and the right priorities."

Petersen has also volunteered this year at Utah Legal Services, and says that experience "made me realize that lawyers can do good things." She is considering attending law school.

Hinckley Institute Newsletter, 1993

Petersen graduated summa cum laude from the University of Utah in 1995, double majoring in political science and English. She would go on to receive her Juris Doctorate from Yale Law School. After graduation, Petersen served as an assistant U.S. attorney in the Organized Crime Section, Narcotics Section and General Crimes Section for the United States Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York from 2003 to 2008. She also served as a legal officer in the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia at the Hague in the Netherlands from 2009 to 2011.

From 2012 to 2015, Petersen was an assistant U.S. attorney for the Violent Crimes Section of the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Utah. She then served as a judge of the Utah Third Judicial District Court from 2015 until she was appointed to serve as a justice on the Utah Supreme Court in 2017.

Now, Justice Petersen gives back to the Hinckley Institute, contributing to our forums by sitting on panels, providing her expert advice, and inspiring the next generation of public servants. Years after her internships, she reflects, "The Hinckley Institute helped me discover the right path for me."

SEASON FOUR

That's a wrap! In May 2020, The Hinckley Report concluded its fourth season on PBS Utah with 135 episodes aired to date. During its final weeks of the season, the show pivoted from filming in studio to an online format, as Utahns observed Governor Gary R. Herbert's stay at home order to slow the spread of COVID-19. Adapting to this challenge was an exciting opportunity. Viewers are accustomed to welcoming us into their homes and in this rare instance, Utah's top journalists, local experts, and political leaders, had the chance to reciprocate – a courtesy rarely offered in television!

Our political insiders joined host Jason Perry for thoughtful weekly discussions on critical issues and topics including municipal elections, the business of the state legislature, several special legislative sessions, impeachment proceedings, and the evolving impacts of the deadly coronavirus.

The Hinckley Institute is grateful for the partnership and support we receive from PBS Utah to produce The Hinckley Report. We take our responsibility to host a civil dialogue on politics seriously, and appreciate viewers for allowing us into their homes. While the show will be on hiatus until the fall, you can subscribe to The Hinckley Report podcast and catch up on developments you may have missed over the past year.

SPEECH CONTEST

$5,000 $1,000 WINNING PRIZE EACH RUNNER UP

HINCKLEY INSTITUTE Wayne Owens Fund

HIP Talks (Hinckley Institute of Politics Talks) is a university-wide speech contest held in honor of former Utah Congressman Wayne Owens. The contest, co-hosted by ASUU and supported by the Wayne Owens Fund, is meant to foster the public speaking skills of University students. The winner of the contest is awarded a $5,000 scholarship, with five $1,000 scholarships for the runners-up.

The sixth annual edition of HIP Talks took on a new format in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Administrative Program Coordinator Kyle Tucker ensured that the contest would still be held. Instead of the traditional live presentation format, students were asked to submit prerecorded videos of their two-minute speeches. In total, 83 brave and articulate students entered their compelling, thought-provoking speeches. A panel of judges consisting of former winners, contest partners, and Hinckley Institute staff reviewed the submissions to select the winners.

After narrowing down the original pool to a group of 30 finalists, the judges made their decision. Noah Hughes won this year's grand prize for his incredibly powerful speech "Like Father, Like..." His video, along with the runners-up can be viewed at hinckley.utah.edu/hip-talks

The Abrelia C. Hinckley Graduate Scholarship was established to encourage students to follow her example of public service and political involvement. A remarkable woman, she combined devotion to her family with true patriotism and a commitment to politics and citizen participation. As the wife of Robert H. Hinckley, she encouraged him to create the Hinckley Institute of Politics. This scholarship is awarded to exceptional women who emulate the values of Abrelia C. Hinckley through their interests in political engagement and public service.

John S. Hinckley was a proud member of the automobile industry who strongly believed in the improvement of community through active participation and was highly involved in local causes. He met Anne, a Virginia native, during his time in the U.S. Army while she was serving in the American Red Cross. The John & Anne Hinckley Scholarship fund was thus created to award annual scholarships for outstanding students whose academic and community pursuits promote active citizenship and public service. The Hinckleys demonstrated great love for the Institute and wanted to ensure that talented students could contribute to the larger political community without financial hindrance.

The Senator Pete Suazo Leadership Foundation was founded in November, 2001, shortly after the tragic death of the late Senator Suazo, a beloved local figure and Utah's first Hispanic State Senator. The foundation was established to honor the legacy and commitment of the Senator, who is remembered as a heroic role model with a strong social conscience. This scholarship seeks to reward the academic success of select standout University of Utah students who demonstrate a commitment to community service.

The Matheson Leadership Scholarship was established in honor of the late governor to offer scholarships that encourage distinguished students to pursue public service and extraordinary leadership in the tradition of Scott M. Matheson. A graduate of the University of Utah and Stanford Law School, Matheson's impressive career included Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney, legal counsel to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and President of the Utah state bar. He served as the Governor of Utah from 1977 to 1985. During his tenure as governor, Matheson supported public education and advocated for states' rights.

The Todd Taylor Academic Scholarship was established at the University of Utah to reward successful students who embody Todd Taylor's work ethic, dedication, and passion. Taylor passed away in 2012 while serving as the longest-tenured state political party executive director in the nation. He is remembered as "a true renaissance man" with a passion for national and local politics, a near photographic memory, encyclopedic knowledge of Utah politics, a sharp wit, and personal authenticity.

The Director's Prize awards highly accomplished students who have shown a commitment to public service. This scholarship is made possible through the generosity of the Clark and Christine Ivory Foundation. The Clark and Christine Ivory Foundation was created in 2004 by Clark Ivory, CEO of Ivory Homes, and his wife Christine. The foundation is committed to proactively searching for innovative ways to lift and empower the individual and to do its part to help communities where it can

HOST OFFICE SPOTLIGHT: Representative Patrice Arent

"It has always been important to me to make sure my interns have as many opportunities as possible."

Patrice Arent is well known as a public servant who fights passionately for the issues she cares about. At the Hinckley Institute, she is not just one of our most accomplished alumni, but also one of our most sought-after internship host offices. From her first campaign intern in 1996 to her last legislative intern in 2020, Arent has provided once-in-alifetime educational and professional experiences to many Hinckley students. Her mentorship for these interns lasts long past their last day on the job, as she is happy to provide life-long career advice and friendship.

Arent's career in public service started at the Hinckley Institute. As an undergraduate majoring in communications, she made Hinckley her home on campus and engaged in multiple internships. Arent recalls, "During my internships,

Governor Matheson and Senator Moss let me participate in some of their strategy meetings. This helped me better understand how to work with colleagues on both sides of the aisle." These experiences gave her experience to start a career in public service, and also informed her views on the importance of internships. Arent later said, "It has always been important to me to make sure my interns have as many opportunities as possible. I want my legislative and campaign interns to understand the full breadth of the work of legislators and candidates. I have tried to include my interns in developing strategy, and in return, have received so much good advice from them."

In 1978, Arent graduated from the University of Utah with a bachelor's degree in communications and went on to secure a JD from Cornell University in 1981. She worked as a Division Chief in the Attorney General's Office and as Associate General Counsel to the legislature before deciding to run for state senate in 1996. Her first Hinckley intern was Jennifer Skougard Huntsman, who helped with her campaign. Arent reflects, "My campaign interns have > helped make it possible for me to serve in public office. They have served as my campaign managers, deputy managers, and have worked in all aspects of my campaigns."

Because Representative Arent puts so much Frank Moss & Patrice Arent responsibility and trust in > her interns, they learn invaluable skills and often attest to how their experience was much more than a typical internship. Ashley Jolin, now a campaign consultant, interned on Arent's 2010 and 2012 campaigns and said, "Rep. Arent's ability to build teams, engage voters, and deliver landslide victories time and time again is legendary. To this day, my professional approach to campaign management is informed by this internship experience."

> At the Utah State Legislature, it is well known that Representative Arent's current intern is one of the busiest people on the Hill. Her interns track legislation, engage with constituents, provide critical research on policy issues, and much, much more. Elise Scott was Arent's last legislative intern in 2020 and said, "There is no better crash course in Utah politics than a legislative internship, and there is no better mentor than Representative Arent. She taught me the importance of doing everything with great care and Beyond teaching the hard skills necessary to succeed as an intern, Arent provides incredible mentorship. Regarding his 2017 legislative internship, Christian Mower said, "I have never met someone as committed to mentorship as Representative Arent. I couldn't have asked for better. Her vision extends far beyond the next few months or years. I am extremely grateful for the time she took to teach me pivotal lessons." Arent has noted that her interns are like her extended family, "Even after their internships are over, I try to stay in touch and help them with their future endeavors, such as finding jobs, applying for scholarships, getting into graduate school, and running for public office."

Arent's impact on the lives of her former interns is enduring. Among her intern alumni are many individuals who have also chosen careers in public service, including Truman scholars, elected officials, congressional candidates, attorneys, doctors, and policy makers. Looking back, Arent says "I have truly been lucky to have some of the very best legislative and campaign interns in the state. They have all taught me so much."

The enduring success of the Hinckley Institute bears similarities to a torch passed from person to person throughout its 55-year history — each director, staff member, student, and supporter instrumental in carrying the Hinckley Institute into the present day. Among its impressive lineage of torch bearers, one woman in particular remains an integral figure in the Hinckley Institute's history: Bae Gardner.

Ironically, Gardner had no intention of creating such a legacy when she joined the Hinckley Institute in 1968. She accepted the position thinking it could be a fun, part-time gig for a few semesters as she raised her family. Indeed, when she received the job offer, Gardner had never even heard of the recently established Hinckley Institute of Politics. At the time, the Hinckley Institute was so small that aside from director JD Williams, Gardner was the Institute's sole employee — running all its operations from a single desk in the political science department.

One year flowed into the next, and before she realized it, Gardner's fun, part-time gig evolved into a full-blown career. "I went with the idea of doing it for a year or two and got hooked." As Gardner's role grew, so too did the Hinckley Institute itself—eventually moving beyond that single desk into its own office space across the hall. University of Utah students were increasingly seeking out internships and opportunities to engage in civic life.

"It was wonderful to be part of that growing, like you were 'raising' a person. Not only did I have new students and new programs and new projects, but I had a new Institute every year because things were growing."

Gardner worked with the Institute's first three directors, JD Williams, RJ Snow, and Ted Wilson, and oversaw the creation and growth of several programs including the Politicians in Residence, Coffee and Politics, and Books and Banter. Gardner was frequently referred to as the "nuts and bolts" of the Hinckley Institute.

The student internships were Gardner's greatest source of satisfaction. She reflected, "Some of my greatest pleasure has come when I have been able to place those students who maybe haven't had much recognition before and who have been afraid, they didn't have a chance.... When they are given opportunity, they shine."

Throughout her 22-year career at the Hinckley Institute, Gardner worked with more than 2,000 interns who were affectionately known as "Bae's Kids." They went on to build fulfilling careers, many of them in politics and key positions of influence.

"Bae Gardner was one of the most welcoming figures an 18-year-old freshman could ever hope to meet in their first days at the University. She made anyone interested in politics feel their home at the U was the Hinckley. She was warm, gracious, and indispensable. Looking back, it is hard to understand how one person could do so much, so pleasantly and seemingly so effortlessly, all while providing such effective adult leadership to so many..."

- Karl Rove, Chief Political Adviser to President George W. Bush

"During my college days, I found a home at the Hinckley Institute of Politics. This sense of belonging started with the smiles, encouragement, and support of Bae Gardner. She boosted my confidence, shared advice when I needed it, and inspired my professional development. Most of all, I could tell she believed in me...an incredible asset for a student anxious to grow and learn. She gave me the gift of self-assurance, and I will always be grateful for her care."

- Natalie Gochnour, Associate Dean, Eccles School of Business; Director, Gardner Policy Institute

Throughout her tenure, Bae Gardner laid the groundwork for the Hinckley Institute to become what it is today. While Gardner's "nuts and bolts" work was essential to maintain the success of the Hinckley Institute, her dedication to the students is her most enduring legacy.

We are grateful to Bae Gardner for her commitment to carrying the torch for the Hinckley Institute and its students. 30 years after her retirement and 12 years after her passing, Bae Gardner's light continues to shine through the Hinckley Institute of Politics.
