

Politics at the Hinckley Institute

University of Utah

Spring, 1978

Director reviews Institute programs

The past year has been one of consolidation, as well as slight expansion of Hinckley Institute of Politics programs. While our traditional internship programs and the Coffee and Politics and Books and Banter programs continued with excellent response from the campus community, we established some new programs and some new relationships which (we feel) will benefit students at the University of Utah.

The William H. Lawrence internship is now established, linking the Hinckley Institute with the Washington Bureau of ABC News. With earnings from a special memorial fund established at the Institute by friends of the late ABC political commentator, a stipend is awarded for a student to spend one month in intensive exposure to politics and political reporting from the nation's capital. Elsewhere in this newsletter the first ABC Lawrence Intern, Truitje Bos, is introduced. As we go to press, the second Lawrence intern, Judd Funk, a third-year law student at the U, is returning from his Washington experience. This internship holds out the promise that it will become one of our most sought-after and successful student opportunities.

We have also expanded our physical facilities slightly in Orson Spencer Hall. The Caucus Room, which has been the traditional gathering place for all Institute sessions, classes, and summer programs, has been expanded, newly carpeted and refurbished. We simply outgrew our smaller space with programs which have often attracted more than one hundred people, and we are very pleased with the increased space which is now available. The coming year will see the purchase of some new furniture and equipment for the remodeled Caucus Room.

As our twelfth year continues and our thirteenth begins in May, we look forward to hosting another Taft Institute of Government Seminar in mid-June, to another election year which will involve dozens of University students in campaign internships, and to a renewal of our Rockefeller Minority Political Training Program, which already has seven successful graduates. We also are contemplating a small but significant publications program, a continuation of our noon Forums, our Politician-in-Residence program, and a new association with the Washington

Center for Learning Alternatives, which will open opportunities for U of U students wishing experience in Washington, D.C. We anticipate launching an incentive program for participatory experience in politics by high school students and faculty with a grant funded by former Utah State Senator and longtime Hinckley Institute advisor Hughes Brockbank. We have also initiated the Paul Porter internship which designates a student as the coordinator of our entire summer intern program in the nation's capital.

All of these activities are made possible through the excellence of our staff, and by the friendship and support of our many friends who contribute regularly. Bae Gardner, our assistant director, observes the tenth anniversary of her affiliation with the Hinckley Institute in March. The growing and continuously good reputation established by the fine students who are associated with Hinckley Institute programs, and the unfailing stability and sound counsel provided by Robert H. Hinckley who continues, as Chairman of the Board of Directors to give us his council and leadership and to participate fully in Institute activities, are further incentives to sustain excellence.

We thank you for your interest and help.

Dr. R. J. Snow

Politicians in residence

Alger Chapman, Republican workhorse and successful businessman and attorney, painted a dismal picture of the party's health during a two day visit in February and stated, "The thing we can't stand in America is a one-party system.

"We're in terrible shape," Alger claimed during his participation in the Politician-in-Residence program established in 1966. "But the Republican Party has raised itself before and I think it will again," he added.

Chapman attributed Gerald Ford's defeat to poor budget management, pointing out that commercial time could have been purchased with the $1.7 million remaining in the campaign treasury on election day. He noted that polls showed many voters didn't decide until the last few days and the additional media use could have made the difference.

In May, General Brent Scowcroft, assistant for national security affairs under President Ford, claimed the country was in the throes of another Communist scare, adding, "The world is far more complex than it was in the 1950's."

Scowcroft also attributed controversy over the Panama Canal to a reaction by the U.S. to the Vietnam trauma and humiliation. "The concern over the Panama Canal now is far in excess to its strategic significance," he concluded.

FORUMS

Forums were held during the winter and spring quarters this year, continuing the program initiated last year as a Bicentennial project. A fall quarter forum was not scheduled because of heavy student involvement in elections.

"Crime in Utah" was the first Forum during winter quarter which featured John McNamara, administrator of the Juvenile Courts, Capt. Nick Morgan, vice and intelligence officer and Wayne Shepherd, Director of Public Safety at the U with Paul Van Dam, Salt Lake County attorney, moderating.

"The Media Role in Politics — Responsible or Not?" commanded attention during the spring quarter, with Roy Gibson of the Department of Communications moderating a panel including Deseret News editor and general manager William Smart, attorney and former Democratic National Committeeman Wayne Black and former Republican State Chairman and attorney Kent Shearer.

Rabbi Abner Bergman and Ellis Ivory discuss "The Influence of Religion on Politics" during a Coffee and Politics session.

Coffee and Politics

This year's Coffee and Politics schedule hosted a wide variety of political leaders and educators discussing contemporary political and public affairs issues. The open forums were established to encourage student, faculty and public debate and discussion on current political topics of interest.

University students join political campaigns

One of the unique activities of the Hinckley Institute is the internship experience gained by students who work with politicians outside the classroom setting.

Their service as campaign aides to candidates at every level of government yields valuable practical knowledge and a point-of-entry into politics for these college-trained students.

Associates of The Hinckley Institute

Many individuals have helped support Hinckley Institute programs during 1977. Contributions are of major assistance to the Institute, and ultimately to the state and nation, since the influx of new talent and skill into all levels of political action gives new life to the political and governmental system.

William H. Lawrence Internship

University senior Truitje Bos was named the Hinckley Institute's first William H. Lawrence intern this year and spent four weeks at the Washington bureau of ABC News last summer.

Established in honor of the late ABC political reporter, the internship remembers the long-time association of Robert H. Hinckley and Mr. Lawrence, vice president of ABC and founder of the Hinckley Institute of Politics.

The 26-year-old Netherlands native, journalism major and former writer for several European magazines found the White House to be the most hectic, Congress the most unpredictable and committee hearings often the most enjoyable.

Bos' job was to observe and learn by working with correspondents, since union restrictions prohibited her from active reporting.

The most fascinating part of the internship, she reported, was noting the inside changes in the news operation brought about by Roone Arledge, ABC News president.

Indicative of the new approach to news at ABC, according to Bos, was a memo circulated from Arledge to staffers which stated, "good journalism must come first — ratings will follow."

DRAPER HINCKLEY SCHOLARSHIP

A second year law student at the University who has extensive experience in local, national and international affairs was named the Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Graduate Scholar for 1977-78.

Joan Draper, 27, was selected by the board of directors of the Hinckley Institute to receive the $2,000 award which is applied to tuition and related expenses.

The scholarship was established in 1975 by Robert H. Hinckley, Institute founder, as a tribute to his late wife, Abrelia, a well-known civic leader.

Draper has worked on the campaign staffs of former Gov. Calvin L. Rampton, former Sen. Frank E. Moss and Gov. Scott Matheson. She also assisted the Utah Presidential campaign of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey. She is a member of the board of directors for the National Planned Parenthood Federation of America and the Population Institute.

Taft Institute Hosts 32 Educators

The seventh Robert A. Taft Institute of Government Seminar, co-sponsored by the Hinckley Institute of Politics, was held June 20 through July 1 last year. Following the theme "Continuity and Change in the American System," the seminar focused on the continued resilience, flexibility and fundamental strength of the American constitutional system. The group of thirty-two participating teachers from Idaho, Nevada, Washington and Utah heard from fifty-eight speakers, including University faculty, Utah State legislators, officials from both state political parties, judges, clergymen, representatives of minority groups, women's leaders, former White House staff members and incumbent and former United States Senators and Congressmen. Utah Governor Scott Matheson addressed the graduation luncheon held at the Fort Douglas Club adjacent to the University campus.

Participants included Judy Bennett, Douglas C. Bennion, Darrell A. Berrett, Jacqueline Catten, Helen Chastain, John E. Claxon, Gary DeBirch, James E. Flanagan, Wesley Gates, Kent W. Gauchay, James Gregory, Lloyd Harrison, Frances Hawkins, David M. Hocklander, Kent Hughes, Vernon R. Jones, Stubby Lyons, Marsha Madsen, Betty Mills, Roger Orr, John M. Sherod, Craig Stark, Lynn D. Stewart, Keith Sumsion, Claudia Thorum, Joan Williamson, Leslie Springer, Leo Prestwich, Keith W. Douglass, Vincent Rice, Phyllis Ford, and Beth Fitzwater.
