

Politics at the Hinckley Institute

The University of Utah

Spring, 1980

Dr. R.J. Snow and Robert H. Hinckley join former Senator W. Hughes Brockbank in presenting $250 check to Box Elder High School teacher Rob Bishop.

Utah high school teacher receives Brockbank Grant

Box Elder High School teacher Rob Bishop has been awarded the first Brockbank Enrichment Grant from the Hinckley Institute of Politics.

Bishop, who is also a Utah state legislator, was presented the $250 cash award during a recent luncheon. He was awarded the grant for his excellent political participation programs initiated at Box Elder High, according to Institute officials. An additional $250 was awarded for future implementation of Mr. Bishop's programs.

The grant was established in 1978 by former state Senator W. Hughes Brockbank. It will be awarded annually to the high school social science teacher who submits the best proposal for upgrading political education

Alumni choose first president

Lowell C. Brown, a 1979 graduate and former ASUU President, has been elected first president of the year-old Hinckley Institute Alumni Association.

"We've established this group as a way of assisting the Institute which helped each of us in so many important ways," Brown said. "Most of the nearly 1000 former Hinckley interns continue to be politically active, and our continuing association can be of great help to the Institute in furthering its programs and impact on the political climate of the state and its public officials."

Brown said an executive committee has been organized to direct the association, including himself, M. John Ashton, Dannis Adamson, David Magleby, Fred Finlinson, Ruth Ann Brown and Tim Zoph.

Regular activities of the association will be announced in the press and in future special mailings.

programs in high schools.

Brockbank firmly supports the philosophy of Institute founder Robert H. Hinckley, that it is a responsibility of the public schools and universities to prepare students to go into politics.

Carolyn Grow

Hinckley Institute for Truman Scholarships

Two years in a row, University of Utah students have been named Truman Scholar for Utah by the National Scholarship Foundation.

Carolyn Grow, 19, a junior political science and journalism major at the University of Utah, was named 1979 Truman Scholar for the state of Utah by the national scholarship foundation.

Grow was one of several Utah students nominated and was selected to receive the stipend following interviews held in Denver Spring 1979 by a regional committee. The scholarship provides tuition and living expenses up to $5,000 per year and may be renewed four times.

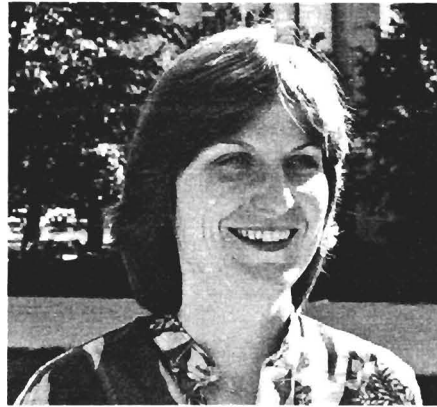

The scholarship program is administered by the Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation which was established by Congress as the official memorial to honor the 33rd president of the United States. The scholarships for outstanding students preparing for careers in public service are provided by interest earned by the $30 million trust fund.

Grow was chosen 1978 Homecoming Queen and presided over the Holiday Bowl in San Diego in December. She has been

Law student wins Hinckley award

A third-year law student has been the Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Graduate Scholar for 1979-80. Kathleen Flake, 29, was selected by the board of directors of the Hinckley Institute to receive the $3,500 award designated for tuition and related expenses.

The scholarship was established in 1975 by Robert H. Hinckley as a tribute to his late wife, Clarissa, who was well known for her extensive civic involvement and commitment to the purposes of the Institute.

Flake graduated from Brigham Young University in 1974. She served as a trial assistant with the Utah American Civil Liberties Union and as a clerk with the Juvenile Justice Legal Advocacy Project in San Francisco.

She was a finalist in Moot Court Competition at the University, served as co-chairman of the Women's Law Caucus and was recipient of the John S. Boyden Scholarship during her second year of study. Flake was a 1977 delegate to the National Women's Conference in Houston, Texas, and was nominated as Utah's Outstanding Young Women of America representative in 1978.

Anthony P. Hurtado

a member of the Public Affairs Board of the Associated Students of the University of Utah and a legislative intern through the Hinckley Institute of Politics.

Anthony P. Hurtado, a sophomore political science major at the University of Utah, has been named the 1980 Harry S. Truman Scholar for Utah.

The 19-year-old student was selected by a committee composed of faculty, administration and student representatives from the Hinckley Institute of Politics, the Center for Public Affairs and Administration and the Department of Political Science.

He attended the Frankfurt American High School in Germany, a school operated by the U.S. Department of Defense. He plans to pursue graduate work in public administration in preparation for a career in government or political service at the state level. Hurtado is the son of Capt. and Mrs. Arthur J. Hurtado, Salt Lake City.

The foundation awarded 76 scholarships in 1980 to residents of each state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and other American territories and possessions considered as a single entity. The scholarship is renewable for four years.

Taft Seminar participants, summer 1979.

Seminar offers experience in the reality of politics

Early last summer, former U.S. Senator Wallace F. Bennett predicted that Ronald Reagan would be the GOP front-runner for the 1980 presidential election. The dean of Utah's Republicans dismissed such candidates as George Bush, John Anderson and Howard Baker as being generally too liberal to win the GOP nomination.

A year later, it is clear that Senator Bennett's insight was prophetic. Such insight was shared with 35 public school teachers and administrators during a Robert A. Taft Institute of Politics Seminar. "We draw upon the experiences of leaders from the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government," says Dr. R. J. Snow, director of the Institute and U vice president for university relations. "We want the seminars to represent reality and to be beneficial to those participating."

Last June, teachers from Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon and Alaska met on campus with political scientists to discuss principles of government and the U.S. political system. The group of 12 women and 23 men heard active citizens, mayors, senators, congressmen, judges, party officials, and the governor debate and share philosophies concerning the nation's two-party system.

Plans are nearly complete to make the 1980 Taft Seminar, scheduled June 16-27, as informational and comprehensive as have been the nine previous sessions.

Caryn Ochse

Lawrence Intern mixes with Washington media

Caryn Ochse, a senior mass communication major, was the 1980 William H. Lawrence intern.

Ochse spent three weeks in the Washington news bureau of the American Broadcasting Co. The internship offers a wide range of experiences observing news gathering operations and opportunities to observe events at the White House, Congress and other news sources. A stipend to defray expenses is provided.

The program was established at the Hinckley Institute in 1977 by friends of Lawrence, who died in 1972 after a distinguished career as a political reporter for ABC. He was a long-time associate of Robert H. Hinckley, founder and former vice president of ABC.

Ochse was news editor of the Daily Utah Chronicle and has completed internships with the Deseret News and the University Public Relations Office. She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi and Kappa Tau Alpha honoraries and serves as president of the campus chapter of Women in Communications. She holds a Department of Communication merit scholarship.

Coffee and Politics: A candidly current update on pressing issues

Author Norman Mailer makes a point to Dr. R. J. Snow, director of the Hinckley Institute, and founder Robert H. Hinckley.

'Books and Banter' provides varied, stimulating program

The Hinckley Institute gives students an opportunity to learn about and discuss new books in the field of politics and government through weekly book review discussion sessions. "Books and Banter" brings professors, students and visitors from the University and the surrounding community together to share observations about the latest literary works in print.

This year author Norman Mailer discussed The Executioner's Song; U.S. Attorney for Utah Ronald Rencher reviewed Thomas Powers' The Man Who Kept the Secrets; while Salt Lake attorney Oscar McConkie presented his views on Patriarchs and Politics by Marilyn Warenski.
