Bangerter Given 'Distinguished Service' Award

The Hinckley Institute Awards Committee has voted to give the first Distinguished Service to Education Award to Gov. Norman Bangerter for his political courage in advocating educational reform and tax increases for education.

Bangerter spent more than a year informing the public about the education crisis, campaigning for educational reform and efficiency, and spelling out tax increases that would be required. The Legislature ended up passing $151 million of Bangerter's original $206 million tax hike plan.

The effort began in 1985 when Bangerter spearheaded the ALERT Foundation whose mission was to urge education to prioritize, encourage educational reform and convince citizens of the need for increased funding for education. Bangerter gave funds raised by the 1986 Governor's Ball to launch the foundation.

Between January and September 1986, he spoke throughout the state about the ALERT program. That effort culminated with a press conference to institute reforms — such as decreasing administrative costs and consolidating school districts — as part of an effort to provide more adequate funding at the classroom level.

In December, he revealed the $206 million tax increase proposal, including a $40 million gas tax increase, an income tax reform plan of more than $100 million, and increases in sales and cigarette taxes. (The Legislature ultimately passed a $50 million income tax plan, almost all of which will be offset by 1987 federal tax reductions.)

The governor might have given the Legislature a total budget figure and told it to come up with a funding plan, says Press Secretary Francine Giani. By making specific proposals the Legislature had to respond to, he personally took the onus of the increases, and as a result, saw his approval rating, which had been 73 percent in November, 1986, drop significantly.

"We felt he was very courageous in putting together his tax proposal and going public with it," said Ted L. Wilson, Institute director and committee member. "Had he not gone out on that limb, we wouldn't have even got a hold-the-line budget, which is essentially what the Legislature passed."

Gov. Norman Bangerter will receive first Distinguished Service to Education Award

Ted R. Capener, vice president for university relations and also a committee member, added, "Gov. Bangerter's leadership in seeking and receiving funds for education" represented a high degree of political risk and courage "which our committee felt should be recognized by this honor."

The award will be given whenever, in the awards committee's judgment, there is a deserving person in politics who has made unusual contributions to education.

Legislative Intern Coordinator Wins Bamberger State Policy Internship

Rusty Bayles, Simon Bamberger intern

The 1987 Governor Simon Bamberger Internship in State Policy has been awarded to Rusty Bayles, a 1986 legislative intern who served as 1987 legislative intern coordinator and teaching assistant. He was at the Capitol daily to trouble-shoot and otherwise assist the 40 interns. "Serving as intern coordinator was a great experience," says Bayles. "I gained a better perception of the overall legislative process. All my experiences through the Institute have been key factors in my undergraduate education."

Bayles is a senior finance student who will pursue a master's degree in business administration. He plans to remain active politically and does not rule out the possibility of running for public office in the future. He served internships with Presidential Classroom for Young Americans in Washington, D.C., with State Archives and with the Utah State Legislature.

The Bamberger Internship is funded by a grant from the Herbert I. and Elsa B. Michael Foundation. The Michael Foundation is a long-time benefactor of the U of U. Elsa Bamberger Michael was a direct descendant of Simon Bamberger, Utah's fourth governor, who served from 1916 to 1920.

Jesse Gallegos

Gallegos Leads Winterim Group

Thirteen U of U students were selected to attend the 1987 Winterim, a two-week symposium Jan. 4-17 in Washington, D.C. The 1987 symposium was on "Leaders on Leadership: Models for Policy-Making."

The students were awarded $600 grants which paid all basic symposium expenses except air fare. They participated in lectures, on-site visits, panel discussions, debates and briefings and got an insider's look at how business and political leaders work together to shape foreign and domestic policy. They heard from leaders in the public, private and independent sectors, including members of Congress and the executive branch and national media representatives.

Jesse Gallegos, a participant in 1981 with the first Hinckley Institute group to participate in Winterim, was intern director/supervisor. In addition to his supervisory responsibilities, Gallegos was the first Hinckley intern to be appointed teaching assistant.

Three Designated as Ben D. Wood Interns

Three Hinckley interns have been designated Ben D. Wood Interns for outstanding performance in Washington, D.C. internships. Tammy Stanek and David Bittmen each had a six-month assignment with the Committee for Education Funding, and Larry Memmott served one quarter with Benchmark, Inc.

Stanek, a senior psychology and communication major, plans to enter law school Fall 1987. She has been on the ASUU Judicial Committee for two years, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and a member of the Psychology Honor Society.

Bittmen is a junior majoring in political science. He received a Presidential Scholarship in 1984 and also was a recipient of the 1984 Chicano Scholarship Fund. After graduation from the U of U in 1988, Bittmen plans to study law. He says law is "a particular subject of fascination...how people informally and formally judge one another...There is a need for a much more vigorous system of judgment."

Memmott will graduate June 1987 with a degree in international political and economic relations. His assignment with Benchmark, Inc., a research and development with emphasis in Latin America, gave him the opportunity to do very substantive research and writing which supplemented very closely his classroom study. He has interests in pursuing a career in international relations, perhaps as a management consultant, or with the State Department/Foreign Service.

The Ben D. Wood Endowment was established in 1984 to recognize outstanding students serving policy internships in Washington, D.C. Funding was provided through a major grant from Wood, a long-time friend of Robert H. Hinckley, with matching funds from IBM. Wood dedicated much of his career to education, serving for twenty-five years as director of the Bureau of Education Research. He also served with Hinckley as a member of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration.

Four Utah Governors Address Historic Hinckley Institute Seminar

At a historic session May 15, 1986, four former governors (L-R, J. Bracken Lee, Scott M. Matheson, Hebert B. Maw and Calvin L. Rampton) addressed an overflow crowd in the Hinckley Caucus Room. They talked about Utah issues past and present, including federal lands, economic development, state finances, the Great Salt Lake and education. Deseret News writer Carrie Moore reported, "There was little consensus, a fair amount of posturing and an awful lot of admonition. Yes it's true: a governor never gives up his title — he just lets others borrow it."

Law Student Wins Hinckley Scholarship

The 1986 Robert H. Hinckley Graduate Scholarship was awarded to Randy Snow. The $2,000 award helped cover tuition and expenses for his second year at the College of Law. Snow, a veteran of the Hinckley Institute, served undergraduate internships with the Utah State Legislature, the Governor's Office, the State Democratic Party and the Democratic National Committee in Washington, D.C. He received an Honors B.A. in political science in 1985. As an undergraduate, he helped establish the Utah Forum and served as associate editor.

"The scholarship provided me with opportunities otherwise not available," Snow says. "It allowed me time to participate in clerkships such as the Department of Interior Administrative Law Judges." Snow is pursuing opportunities for judicial clerkships on the state and federal levels after he earns his Juris Doctorate degree.

The scholarship was established in 1983 by Dr. Ben Wood, a long-time friend of Mr. Hinckley, and is awarded to graduate students who share Mr. Hinckley's ideals and who seek careers or professional involvement in government or politics.

Randy Snow, Robert H. Hinckley Scholarship

MPA Student Wins Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Scholarship

Sherrilee Scofield, a political science graduate student pursuing a master of public administration degree, was named the 1986 Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Graduate Scholar. She is the recipient of a $3,500 award which has helped pay 1986-87 tuition and expenses at the U of U. Scofield is emphasizing American government and the judicial system in her graduate studies and hopes also to obtain a law degree. She will be a political science teaching assistant in 1987-88.

The scholarship was established in 1975 by Robert H. Hinckley as a memorial to his wife, Abrelia Clarissa, and is awarded to graduate students whose interests, formal training and life goals include a commitment to politics and to the ideals which guided Mrs. Hinckley's life.

Sherrilee Scofield

Grants Awarded To Former Interns

Two former Hinckley interns were 1986 recipients of $1,000 study awards to help pay for graduate studies. They are:

Sally McMinimee, a third-year law student who holds a bachelor's in political science and a master of public administration degree from the U of U. McMinimee was the 1985-86 Leary Scholar and was a 1987 finalist in Trayner Moot Court, receiving also the best oral argument. She plans to practice law in Salt Lake City.

Patricia Frandsen, a graduate of the College of Business, who is currently working toward a masters degree in applied economics and is teaching economics at Utah Technical College. While serving a state legislative internship, Frandsen decided to run for office herself and in 1984 was a Democratic candidate for state representative in District 28. She received 45% of the vote in a year dominated by Republicans. Frandsen plans eventually to form an economic research firm.

Flynn Andrizzi

Jaqualin Friend

Kurt Larson

Students Nominated For 1987 Harry S. Truman Scholarships

Flynn Andrizzi, Jaqualin Friend and Kurt Larson were U of U nominees for the 1987 Harry S. Truman Scholarships. They were chosen because of superior academic performance, integrity, communication skills, excellent government leadership potential and commitment to future government service.

Friend was selected as a finalist and participated in regional interviews held March 17 in Denver. She was named the Utah State alternate. Jaqualin is a political science major specializing in Public Administration. She has served internships at the Utah State Legislature and with the Committee for Educational Funding in Washington, D.C. She also worked on the 1984 South Salt Lake mayoral campaign for Mayor James Davis.

Friend is an associate editor for the Utah Forum, an undergraduate journal dealing with contemporary political issues. She plans to attend law school and aspires to be appointed as a judge. Her nominating essay discussed the illegality and immorality of using disinformation in U.S. foreign policy.

Andrizzi is a political science/public relations major with an interest in state and local government. He has served internships with the Utah League of Cities, the Salt Lake City Task Force for the Homeless and with the National League of Cities in Washington, D.C. Andrizzi is a past ASUU Assembly member and currently serves as Public Affairs Board chair, a position which includes the responsibility of chief ASUU lobbyist at the State Legislature.

Larson will graduate summer quarter 1987 with a degree in political science and a major in French. He will be working for the next two years with Merrill Lynch in New York City, and will then go to graduate school to pursue a law degree or an MBA. Larson has been active in his political party and in ASUU. He hopes to be a candidate for national office some day.

The Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation administers the national program and annually awards about 100 scholarships nationwide. Truman Scholars receive four-year renewable $7,500 stipends for undergraduate and graduate school tuition and living expenses.

Sally McMinimee, Patricia Frandsen win study grants

Rocco C. Siciliano

Three Designated 'Siciliano Interns'

In 1980, Rocco C. Siciliano and his company, ARA Services, established the Siciliano Endowment at the Hinckley Institute to fund the internships in public policy. They have continued to increase the original endowment, and in November 1986 Siciliano contributed a $35,000 gift of stock, which will fund a significantly greater number of internships in Washington, D.C.

Based on nominations from various organizations that had hosted Hinckley interns, three students — Kristi Bess, Debbie Maddux and Wendy Jacobsen — have been honored by being named the 1987 Rocco C. Siciliano Interns.

Bess, a senior majoring in English, Spanish and International Relations, interned for the Supreme Court Fall 1986. She has been a staff member for the Chronicle the past two years. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, Freshman Honor Society and the U of U Varsity Tennis Team. After graduation Bess plans to specialize in international corporate law and work for the Peace Corps.

Maddux interned for the Republican Senate Conference Committee. A graduating mass communication senior, she is the publicity director for the PRSSA chapter as well as captain of the U team for the national Bateman Public Relations Case Study Competition. She also has served an internship with the U. Public Relations Department.

Jacobsen, a senior in computer science, interned with the National Science Foundation in the Office of Legislative and Public Affairs, where she researched, wrote publications and brochures and structured a computer filing system. Jacobsen was active in ASUU election campaigns in 1985 and 1986 and co-chaired the March of Dimes Wheelchair Marathon. She is a member of the Golden Owl Honor Society and was chosen the Chi Omega Alumnae Scholar. She plans to earn a master's degree in informational systems and computer networking.

Jeff Durtschi, George S. Eccles intern

U.S. Senate Banking Committee Intern Wins Eccles Honor

Jeff Durtschi, a finance major, has been named this year's outstanding George S. Eccles Intern in Business Policy. The award is given to Durtschi for his work with the Senate Banking Committee Fall Quarter 1986. Durtschi graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in Portland, Ore., and came to the U of U because he was recruited by the ski team. He was a member of the NCAA championship team in 1984 and 1986 and individual slalom champion in 1985.

Durtschi's major project at the committee was an independent research project on the concentration characteristics of the security industry. He says, "It was the most interesting because it was all mine from beginning to end. I met with officials from the banking and security industries, and it was exactly in line with my career interests. Being primarily a student of business I was eager for the diversification opportunity that the Hinckley Institute made possible. The benefit of understanding government regulation and the process to enact it is just as important for the business major as it is for the political science major."

Durtschi plans to work in finance/securities industry for a year or two after graduation and then to return to school for an MBA, master of finance or international finance degree.

Robert H. Hinckley, founder Hinckley Institute of Politics

From the Director

Robert H. Hinckley will be 96 June 8, 1987. He lives in Eden, Utah where he attends to his horses, enjoys the beauty of his surroundings and keeps his family traditions alive.

One tradition of the Hinckley family is to respect and cultivate youth. Robert H. Hinckley's dream 23 years ago was to found an institute which would dignify the relationship of college students to the two-party process. Mr. Hinckley wanted young people to be inspired and informed — he began the tradition of Hinckley speakers. He also wanted students to share in the joy and knowledge of day-to-day politics — he founded the intern program. Many programs have been added to the Institute over the years, but the speakers and internships remain the heart of Mr. Hinckley's dream.

Mr. Hinckley frequently calls from Eden. He wants to know how things are going. Are the students learning? Are they excited about politics? We are always happy to report that our students are the cream of the crop and they are the hope of the future. He never fails to pass on his love and respect for Hinckley interns.

The Hinckley dream is one of love. It is love for the potential and dignity of youth. It is love for America and the wonder of its two-party system. It is love for politics. Mr. Hinckley's age has not diminished the twinkle in his eye nor his anxious concern that our students learn about the practical world of politics.

Robert H. Hinckley, Jr. is the acting Chairman of the Governing Committee of the Institute. He, under the guiding influence of his father, handles the concerns of the Institute with care and concern. John Hinckley and Betty Nibley, the other Hinckley family members, take an on-going role in the Institute. The Hinckley Institute is a proud statement of community concern by one of Utah's and America's finest families.

As Robert H. Hinckley approaches 96, we realize he is almost half as old as the United States Constitution. We are thankful that his youth — his regard for other people — still burns as brightly as ever.

Institute Sponsors 15th Taft Seminar

The fifteenth Taft Seminar for Teachers, co-sponsored and hosted by the Hinckley Institute of Politics, was held June 16-27, 1986. Teachers from Utah, Idaho, Nevada and Wyoming participated in seminars, workshops, discussion sections, special luncheons and lectures. Teachers heard from state legislators; state and local court officials; U.S. representatives and senators; the governor and a former governor of Utah; members of the executive branch of national and state government; city and county officials; pollsters; campaign strategists; educators; political party officials; and candidates.

Bruce Bell, political consultant; Kay Christenson, campaign manager, Wayne Owens for Senate Campaign; Bud Scruggs, Republican political consultant and Vice President, Hurst Jarrard & Company; share differing perspectives and opinions on the art of portraying candidates and creating favorable public perceptions.

Intern Mingles With White House Press

It's not every day a student gets the chance to go to the White House with Sam Donaldson or eat pizza with Ted Koppel. But those were just some of the things senior journalism major Mary Sawyers did as the 1987 William H. Lawrence Intern at ABC News in Washington, D.C.

The internship was established in honor of William Lawrence, a political reporter for ABC. Lawrence was a close friend of Robert H. Hinckley, founder of the Hinckley Institute and one of the founders and vice presidents of ABC.

Sawyers spent the month of January working on the news program Nightline with Ted Koppel. She says she expected the well-known television anchor to be conceited, but in fact, "he's just a regular guy." Says Sawyers, "He even sat down to eat pizza with the rest of us while we worked through dinner. Sawyers says Koppel, unlike most nightly news anchors, insists on writing much of his own material.

Sawyers was able to take one day off at Nightline to go to a White House press conference with Sam Donaldson. She says she was a little nervous about meeting ABC's most talked about reporter. But, contrary to his reputation for impatience and arrogance, Sawyers says he was very attentive, showing her around the White House press room and introducing her to President Reagan's press secretary, Larry Speakes.

Commenting on her time in Washington, D.C., Sawyers says, "It's the most exciting city in the world if you love politics." She hopes to work there as a political correspondent after she gets experience in smaller markets.

Two Politicians-in-Residence Visit U.

Politicians-in-Residence enjoy an extended visit to the U of U. In addition to conducting a Coffee and Politics program, they make classroom visits and are honored at luncheons and banquets, depending on their length of stay.

Larry Sabato

Larry Sabato, election analyst and associate professor of government and foreign affairs at the University of Virginia, visited the Hinckley Institute in November 1986 as the 30th politician-in-residence. He spoke about polling and direct mail and shared parts of his extensive collection of television advertising.

Sabato graduated from the University of Virginia with a B.A. in government and did a year's graduate study in public policy at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University.

Rocco C. Siciliano

Rocco C. Siciliano, great friend and benefactor of the Institute and recently retired CEO and Chairman of the Board of American Health Properties, visited the Hinckley Institute Winter Quarter as the 31st politician-in-residence. In a Coffee and Politics session on ethics in business and the corporate conscience, Siciliano stated, "If morals are not applied to business, life is divided between a private life and one of professional pursuits. People will be forced into a schizophrenic attitude. They won't be able to maintain wholeness or a sense of morality."

Siciliano graduated from the U of U, served in Washington, D.C. as Undersecretary of Commerce, as Assistant Secretary of Labor and as Special Assistant for Personnel Management for President Eisenhower. He also served on the Federal Pay Board from 1971 to 1973.

Scowcroft Speaks At Alumni Banquet

About 250 former interns and guests attended the annual Intern Alumni Banquet May 9. Lt. General Brent Scowcroft, Vice Chairman of Kissinger Associates, Inc. and former Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, was the guest speaker.

Scowcroft shared his experience and expertise on international terrorism, stating that United States national policy on terrorism needs to be coherent, firm and widely understood. While acknowledging that the response to Libyan terrorists was somewhat controversial, he said it appeared to have the desired effect of making clear to Libya that we would not tolerate actions such as those perpetrated in Germany and also conveyed to other nations that we intend to take firm action.

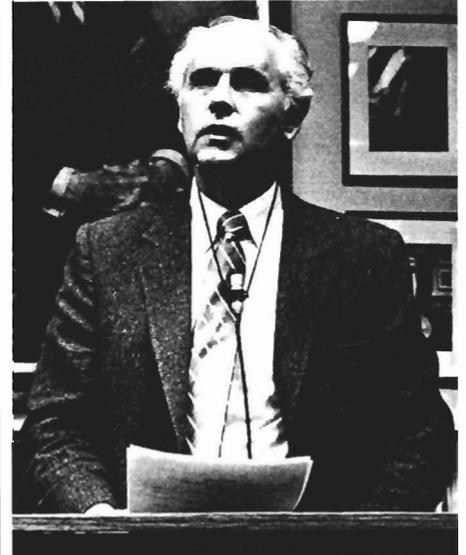

Scowcroft has since served as a member of the Tower Commission, which was highly critical of the administration's response in the Iran arms-for-hostages incident. He served on the commission with former Senator John Tower and former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie.
