

Politics at the Hinckley Institute

Autumn 1994

“Hinckley Institute Celebrates Silver Anniversary”

Ted Wilson

*By Ted Wilson
Director, Hinckley Institute of Politics*

In 1942, Robert H. Hinckley was in charge of America's emerging air travel industry as Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aviation. Among other responsibilities, it fell upon Hinckley to organize and support the construction of new airports along the eastern coast of the United States.

Mr. Hinckley met with Fiorello LaGuardia, the immensely popular mayor of New York City. LaGuardia wanted a new airport located somewhere on upper Manhattan on land under the mayor's jurisdiction. Upon review of the mayor's proposed site, Hinckley determined that the space was too small. "Fiorello," he said, "There will be a day when air travel will be the common means of travel in America and your site is not large enough." The mayor began to cry. After he composed himself, he told Hinckley that he would oppose any attempts to place the airport outside of Manhattan Island. It was not an insignificant threat.

A week later Mr. Hinckley called him back on the phone. The bad news was first. "Fiorello, we have determined to place the airport out of your jurisdiction in Westchester County." Then the good news, "But we have decided to name it after you." There was a silence on the end of the line for a moment. Then the mayor said, "Well, Bob, that will be an acceptable compromise." Hinckley hung up. A big smile crossed his face. He had just pulled off a political finesse.

Robert H. Hinckley loved the political finesse and the political game. But he also understood how terribly serious politics was. He often said, "If we don't practice politics, we have to use guns." An alarming statement perhaps, but also a recognition of the importance of politics.

Mr. Hinckley also felt that politics, beyond its necessity, was an honorable and dignified profession. After his many years in public service, he was driven by the desire and need to convey this concept to young people. So he sought out the president of the University of Utah in 1965 and offered, along with the Edward John Noble Foundation, the first endowment to establish the Hinckley Institute of Politics.

R. J. Snow

Dr J.D. Williams, a well-liked political science professor, was chosen as the Institute's first director. Williams went to work and established Hinckley programs that still operate today like "Coffee and Politics" — the institute's speaker program — and "Books and Banter" — a program that reviews new political books. Williams sent the first interns out in 1965 to serve in political offices. Today, the intern program has grown to over 200 interns a year including 120 in Washington, D.C. and 40 at the State legislature.

In 1975, Williams went back to the Political Science Department and Dr. R. J. Snow, the university's Vice President for University Relations, was appointed to direct the institute along with his vice presidential duties. The Snow era lasted until 1985 and was distinguished by the establishment of a firm financial foundation for the institute. Institute fund-raising created a $1.6 million endowment by 1985. Bae Gardner, Assistant Director of the institute, ran the day to day affairs and became beloved by the many students who became "Bae's Kids."

"Denos Awarded Robert H. Hinckley Scholarship"

Kenneth Denos

Political Science and Finance graduate Ken Denos was awarded the 1994 $3500 Robert H. Hinckley Graduate Scholarship.

Denos served as a member of the Hinckley Institute of Politics Student Advisory Committee and as the chair of the ASUU Governmental Affairs Board. During his time as Governmental Affairs Chair Denos worked with the legislature, meeting with key legislators, the Board of Regents and lobbying for higher education bills. He also organized voter registration.

"In Utah we run the risk of paying too little attention to the benefits that higher education brings," says Denos.

Denos is a first year law student and wants to be involved in children and women's issues as well as in business. "I don't think these issues are contradictory," says Denos. He would like to serve the state by participating in politics, possibly as a candidate.

"I am thrilled to receive this award named after the founder of the Hinckley Institute . . ."

"The Hinckley Institute of Politics is the most instructive non-classroom institution for politics in the state. I am thrilled to receive this award named after the founder of the Hinckley Institute," says Denos. "It means that I can devote my time to the studying of law."

The scholarship, established in 1983 by Dr. Ben D. Wood, a longtime friend of Robert H. Hinckley is given to male graduate students who share Hinckley's ideals and seek careers or professional involvement in government or politics.

"Hinckley Institute of Politics Alumni Association Formed"

*By David C. Gessel
President, HIPAA*

Robert H. Hinckley, the founder and patron saint of the Hinckley Institute of Politics was a man of vision and courage. He had the vision and courage to be a pioneer in three of the major inventions that have transformed our world: the automobile, the airplane and the television. He also had the vision and courage to act on his belief that politics was an honorable endeavor and that politics should be the part-time profession of every citizen. His vision of good government and honorable politics became a reality in 1965 when he founded and endowed the Hinckley Institute of Politics.

In the nearly thirty years of its existence, the Hinckley Institute of Politics has gone a long way in fulfilling Mr. Hinckley's political vision. Thousands of students have gained first hand experience in the political process and have gained an intense loyalty to the Hinckley Institute of Politics and its mission. A number of Hinckley alumni have been elected as state senators or representatives or have been elected to local office. Many others wield significant influence in state or national government as appointed officials. Still others have become influential in their chosen careers in law, education, business, media and government.

Recently, this loyalty and love for the Hinckley Institute was the catalyst for a number of Hinckley alumni to meet and form the Hinckley Institute of Politics Alumni Association ("HIPAA"). The purpose of HIPAA is to provide a mechanism for continued involvement of former Hinckley interns with each other and with the Hinckley Institute of Politics and to carry on Mr. Hinckley's vision of active involvement in the political process. To this end, HIPAA has already sponsored a quarterly luncheon event and is planning further quarterly events, including an annual dinner. HIPAA is also planning to publish a regular newsletter.

HIPAA annual dues are $20 for alumni that are no longer students and $10 for alumni that are still students. We welcome your membership, participation and ideas. Please contact me or Amy Frampton at the Hinckley Institute if you have questions or need further information. Please join us in the exciting endeavor to further the vision of Robert H. Hinckley and his faith in us and the political process.

The Snow era ended in 1985 as R.J. Snow left the university to go into private business. Ted Wilson, mayor of Salt Lake City, was hired to become the new director, thus launching the Hinckley Institute of Politics into its third decade. Under Wilson's directorship, internships have been expanded, the institute is regularly broadcast on television and radio and the endowment has been increased to $2.8 million.

"Every student a politician..." is the operative phrase in the preamble of the incorporation documents of the Hinckley Institute of politics. The phrase is a quote from Mr. Hinckley and its emphasis is on students and politics. Robert H. Hinckley, son of the founder and the chair of the institute governing board always asks when new programs are presented, "What's in it for the student?" This statement reflects the tradition of Robert H. Hinckley, the Hinckley family and the governing board that insists the student will always be first at the Hinckley Institute.

On May 10, 1995, The Hinckley Institute will celebrate its Thirtieth Anniversary. During 1995, there will be many events celebrating the institute including the kick-off of a new capital campaign, a celebratory dinner, and programs emphasizing the history of the institute and politics over the past thirty years.

Robert H. Hinckley would smile, just as he did when he finessed Fiorello LaGuardia, if he could consider today the impact of his legacy at the University of Utah.

“White House Intern Awarded R.J. Snow Public Policy Internship”

Hinckley Intern Donald Dunn with President Bill Clinton.

Political Science graduate Donald Dunn was awarded the R.J. Snow Public Policy Internship for 1993-94. Dunn served as an intern to the White House Office of Public Liaison January to June 1994.

While at the Office of Public Liaison, Dunn worked directly with the Public Liaison Director, Political Affairs Director and Cabinet Secretary. He worked with constituent requests and coordinated briefings for top White House aides. He also was able to staff a phone call for President Clinton. Dunn now serves as Office Manager in the Office of Political Affairs at the White House.

“Each day I come to work, I have to stop and think, hey, the kid from Utah made it here to work for the President of the United States,” says Dunn. “It is a real honor for me to come each day and help the President. I really can’t believe I am here. The Hinckley Institute helped me gain a wonderful opportunity.”

Dunn was active in ASUU and the Bennion Center while at the University of Utah. He was a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and attended the Hinckley Institute’s Washington Center seminar. He was a Truman scholar finalist in 1992. He is active in many community activities including, the West High Alumni Association and the Utah Democratic Party.

The R.J. Snow Internship was established in 1986 by former Hinckley interns to honor R.J. Snow, Hinckley Institute Director from 1975 to 1985.

“Hinckley SAC- Hard at Work”

*By Wendy Evans
Hinckley SAC President*

The Hinckley Institute of Politics Student Advisory Committee has been hard at work during Spring and Summer quarters preparing new projects aimed at promoting the Hinckley Institute of Politics and strengthen students involvement in student activities. As the SAC enters its third year of existence we are full of creative and exciting ideas for the upcoming school year.

The new 1994-1995 officers, Meredith Moss and Amy Richins as Vice-Chairs and Cori Petsche as Secretary, are motivated and ready to give their best to the Hinckley SAC projects.

Under the direction of Jason Curry, we are in the process of creating intern books to explain the Washington D.C. internships in greater detail. These reference books will be located on the Hinckley Institute and available to students who would like more information about any or all of the internships. We are also planning brief visits to Political Science classes.

In an effort to promote opportunities that the Hinckley Institute offers, the SAC has been present at many University activities this spring. We will continue to be visible at many U of Utah activities throughout the year.

Finally, we are planning several programs throughout the year that we think students will find very useful, including voter registration, a financial aid seminar and a leadership and involvement seminar, all of which should be a great success.

I want to give a big thank you to the Hinckley staff: Pat, Amy, Jayne and Ted for all of their help with the various SAC projects. We are looking forward to a fun and productive year.

Lisa Petersen

“Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Scholarship goes to First Year Law Student”

Lisa Petersen, a first year law student at the University of Utah, was awarded the 1994 Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Scholarship.

A political science graduate, Petersen served an internship at the state legislature with Representative Karen Shepherd through the Hinckley Institute. My internship “Gave me an opportunity to work on the issues I care about,” says Petersen. She went on to serve as the Executive Director of Utahns for Choice and to help re-start the College Democrats at the University of Utah.

Having served three internships through the Hinckley Institute, Petersen says, “Internships are a wonderful way to get involved in the process and learn through experience. It gives you a start that everyone should take advantage of.”

Petersen is interested in the issues that surround domestic violence and family law. “We need to teach people that violence is not ok,” says Petersen. She thinks “It is wonderful to receive awards for doing things that I love. It is encouraging and makes me want to continue.”

Robert H. Hinckley established the scholarship in 1975 as a memorial to his wife, Abrelia Clarissa. It is awarded to a woman graduate student whose interests, formal training and life goals include a commitment to politics and community service ideals, which guided Mrs. Hinckley’s life.

“Rocco C. Siciliano Fellowship Sends Seven To Washington”

By Steve Roll

Thanks to the Rocco C. Siciliano Fellowship seven University of Utah students were granted the opportunity to participate in the inauguration of the “Hinckley Week in Washington”. This event took place during Spring Break ‘94 and allowed these students along with their director/coordinators, Dr. Tim Chambless and Ted Wilson, to enjoy and experience many exciting people and places. Sherrie Crespo, Carol Goode, Arbra Johnson, Jeanette Moscillo, Steve Roll, Russell Smith and Lisa Tolk took part in the first ever effort of the Hinckley Institute to send students to Washington D.C. with its’ own planned calendar of activities.

“I perceive this first and unique Spring Break trip to be quite successful. I believe students found each day to be substantive and educational,” said Dr. Chambless, who proved tireless in his devotion and enthusiasm. The group remained together during the majority of the trip with the exception of a few “open” periods allowing for individual interests.

“It was very interesting to meet people of diverse backgrounds in both business and politics,” said Jeanette Moscillo, a senior with a dual major in business and political science. “The trip also served to enhance friendships,” says Moscillo.

Carol Goode recommends the trip as “a political opportunity of a lifetime,” and was very touched by her experience at the National Archives. “If you want to experience a taste of history. I totally recommend it,” says Goode.

A graduate student in political science, Lisa Tolk said, “I thought it was very informative to meet individually with members of the Utah delegation and learn their views regarding the State of Utah and the nation.”

Sherrie Crespo, now with her MPA from the U. called it “a moving and emotional experience,” with regard to its historical value and cultural aspects. “Anyone in school should try to attain this experience and expand their knowledge.”

A highlight of the week to which all agreed was the visit with Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas. Both Crespo and Tolk commented that he was a man of “great presence and awe-inspiring.” Arbra Johnson agrees. Johnson, who graduated in June of 1994 in communications, found the trip solidified her views. “The great leaders of this country, especially the founders, understood the privilege of liberty and freedom, its value and the cost of defending it even to the sacrifice of their lives, fortunes and sacred honor.”

Steve Roll, a senior in Political Science, said, “The entire trip was very memorable especially the day we toured the Mall between the Capitol and the Lincoln Memorial. It rained all day and we jokingly refer to it as the day of the death march.”

Ted Wilson, Director of the Hinckley Institute of Politics, was in attendance for most of the trip and provided a great deal of personal insight and experience which enhanced the learning experience for all involved. His contributions along with those of Dr. Chambless combined to make this initial Spring Break Trip from Monticello to the Oval Office to Gettysburg very successful.

The Rocco C. Siciliano Endowment was established to promote students internships in public policy and offers scholarships to encourage involvement.

Mike Call

“Frank E. Moss Internship on Caring Goes to Mike Call”

Mass communications major Mike Call received the Frank E. Moss Internship on Caring for being the outstanding intern at the Caring Institute for the 1993-1994 school year.

Call worked at the Caring Institute, a non profit agency that recognizes people nationwide for community service. He worked on the national caring awards and a photo essay for teens and children on caring. He also did outreach with AIDS patients.

“I loved working in a place that had the goals the Caring Institute did. The service aspect was wonderful,” says Call. “This gave me the experience that I need because I hope to work in non profit development and fundraising.”

While at the University of Utah, Call has worked at Camp Kostopulos, where he is currently the Summer Camp Director. He also was active in ASUU, serving on the public relations board and involved in the Bennion Center.

The Frank E. Moss Internship on Caring is named after the former Senator of eighteen years. Its intent is to steer students toward working with social institutions that help those with special needs. The original endowment was set up by Kem and Carolyn Gardner to honor Senator Moss.

“Governor Speaks to Hinckley Alumni at Annual Intern Reunion”

By Cori Petsche
Hinckley SAC Member

Governor Mike Leavitt spoke to luncheon guests at the November 1993 Hinckley Institute of Politics Annual Reunion at the University Park Hotel.

The current Governor addressed many issues including the rhetorical topic, “Is American Industry Declining?” He also spoke on the issue of federalism, regarding states’ rights and states’ power.

Hinckley Institute of Politics Director Ted Wilson hosted the luncheon. He announced that Governor Leavitt is focusing on five objective while in office: making world class education the standard in Utah; building a stronger economy based around quality, higher paying jobs; protecting Utah’s enviable quality of life; making government more efficient and effective and insuring that the government does not grow faster than the private sector in caring for the needy.

Governor Leavitt has a good background in the field of education. He formerly served on the Board of Regents for the State of Utah, which oversees higher education institutions.

Governor Michael Leavitt

He discussed the balance of power between the state and federal government. The governor feels that this issue will define politics in this decade.

Leavitt stated that in talking with President Clinton, who is a former governor himself, he realized that Clinton shared his feelings for the need of decentralized control of the federal government. Leavitt went on to defend states rights. He views decentralization as one way to decrease the high level of bureaucracy plaguing our government.

The 1993-94 Hinckley and Truman scholarship award winners were introduced by Pat Ryan, current Hinckley Institute Intern Coordinator, and Janice Hinckley. The Matheson Scholars were presented by Norma Matheson.

“Truman Scholarship Given to James Harper”

Gulf War veteran James Harper was awarded the 1994 Harry S. Truman Foundation scholarship.

The Truman Foundation was established by Congress in 1975 and honors college students who have outstanding leadership potential, plan to pursue careers in public service and wish to attend graduate school. The scholarship will provide up to $30,000 for Harper’s senior year and graduate studies, covering tuition, books and living expenses.

Trained in military intelligence and Russian by the Army, Harper was awarded a Bronze Star for his service interrogating Iraqi prisoners in Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War. “I was shocked and amazed at the negligence of the Iraqi government. They did not have the supplies they needed and the government preached a plastic ideology to the soldiers,” says Harper.

James Harper

Harper has worked in the community in many capacities including the AIDS foundation, Special Olympics and Shiners Hospital. He feels that service is crucial at the grass roots level. “Working directly with those you are helping is better for me and I believe, more useful for the people I am serving. I get more out of

Also an involved student at the University of Utah, Harper sits on the ASUU Supreme Court, is active in University debate and is a member of the Hinckley Institute Student Advisory Committee. He served an internship at the Utah Attorney General’s office during the 1993-94 school year.

“Working directly with those you are helping is better for me and I believe, more useful for the people I am serving.”

Harper plans on attending law school and looks to continue his service through the military. After retiring from military service he hopes to work for the State Department, possibly in the area of military law or Russian affairs

Harper joins seventeen other U. students who have earned Truman scholarships since 1979.

“ABC intern works at Washington News Bureau”

Geoffrey Fattah

Geoffrey Fattah, a broadcast communications major was chosen to intern at the ABC Washington News Bureau, winter quarter 1994.

“It was great seeing people who are the best taking their jobs so seriously. It gave me a taste of what the business is like and made me want to go into broadcasting even more,” says Fattah.

Fattah did most of his work with Primetime Live, an ABC newsmagazine. Some of the research he did was for a show on the California earthquake relief bill that caused a stir in the Senate and was angrily mentioned on the Senate floor by Senator Byrd (D-VA). Fattah explains, “This taking place was not a normal occurrence. I was surprised and so were the career staffers that I worked with.”

“The lessons I learned were about keeping a sense of humor and how people pull together to get a story on the air,” says Fattah. He wants to go into reporting political and community affairs, starting at an affiliate station.

While at the University of Utah Fattah served an internship at KUTV and was a reporter for Newsbreak, student television.

The William H. Lawrence Internship provides students with a political/communication emphasis the opportunity to spend winter quarter in Washington D.C. at the ABC news bureau.

The internship was established in honor of William Lawrence, a political reporter for ABC. Lawrence was a close friend of Robert H. Hinckley, founder of the Hinckley Institute and one of the founders and first vice presidents of ABC.

“Marketing Major Named George S. Eccles Intern”

Brent Cannon

Brent Cannon received the George S. Eccles Internship in Business Policy for his time spent at Mendez England and Associates.

While at Mendez England and Associates Cannon assisted Tom England with proposal bids, doing research and helping put the proposals together. “They have a small staff but they were so busy that I was able to do a lot. I was thrown into the fire and it made it a great experience.”

Mendez England is a firm that bids with the federal government to teach U.S. business and politics in developing countries. Cannon says that, “I learned so much about the complications of doing international business, even little issues like different time zones and currency.”

While at the University of Utah, Cannon has been active as a volunteer lobbyist at the State Legislature and in the Bennion Center as a project director. He is also a member of College Republicans.

Cannon will graduate in June 1995 and is planning on a career in the field of Marketing.

“Bamberger State Policy Intern Takes Experience to State Capitol”

Paul Christenson

Accounting major Paul Christenson took his legislative experience back to the Capitol for the 1994 session, serving as the Legislative Intern Supervisor fall and winter 1993-94. Christenson served as intern for Senator Haven Barlow in the State Legislature during the 1993 session.

The Governor Simon Bamberger Internship in State Policy was awarded to Christenson, giving him the opportunity to serve as Supervisor. “I enjoyed advising the students and watching them learn about state political process was really exciting,” Christenson says.

Serving as Supervisor he helped arrange speakers for the fall 1993 training class and also assisted in grading and assigning interns to their legislators.

“I love the political process . . .”

During the session he advised the students and helped them with occasional problems. He says he wanted to “help the interns maximize the learning and the experience.”

One of the things Christenson enjoyed most was working with the students and returning to work with the legislators and their staffs again. “I love the political process and enjoyed being involved at the legislature for a second time,” says Christenson.

Christenson is a member of the Hinckley Institute Student Advisory Committee and directed the Bennion Center Volunteer Corp during the 1993-1994 school year. He served an internship with Senator Hatch’s Washington D.C. office the summer of 1993. Graduating in 1995, Christenson wants to attend graduate school in a field related to accounting.

The Bamberger Internship is funded through a grant from the Herbert I. and Elsa B. Michael Foundation, a long-time benefactor of the University. Elsa Bamberger Michael was a direct descendant of Simon Bamberger, Utah’s fourth governor from 1916-1920.

“Scott M. Matheson Leadership Forum Hosts Deputy Secretary Kunin”

Deputy Secretary Madeleine Kunin

By Norma Matheson
Chair, Matheson Forum

The Scott M. Matheson Leadership Forum welcomed Deputy Secretary of Education Madeleine Kunin as this past year's Fellow. Ms. Kunin has previously served as Governor of Vermont for three terms, from 1985 to 1991. She was the first woman and third Democrat to be elected in that state, and became the first woman in United States history to serve three terms.

While in office, Governor Kunin was known for her achievements in the areas of education, the environment and children's services. Governor Kunin was cited as being one of the nation's top education Governor by Fortune magazine.

During her visit to Utah, Deputy Secretary Kunin participated in a breakfast meeting with members of the University Administration, Board of Regent members, faculty, student leaders, and Hinckley Institute and Matheson Forum members. She led an interesting discussion of the current administration's issues and policies. Afterward, she gave the Matheson Leadership Lecture and visited an area high school to see a demonstration of its' conflict resolution program.

Deputy Secretary Kunin joins President Bill Clinton and University of Virginia Professor Larry Sabato as distinguished Scott M. Matheson fellows at the University of Utah.

Amee Johnson Awarded Gardner Honor

Amee Johnson

Amee Johnson was awarded the Bae B. Gardner Public Policy Internship for her 1994 internship at the Committee for Education Funding.

In her time at CEF, Johnson worked with Congressional staff, dealt with budget issues and worked with educational community's reaction to the President's second budget.

Johnson says her internship helped her focus and taught her how what she learned at the University of Utah plays out in the real world of politics. "I learned about the budget and appropriation issues as well as how coalitions and the hill work. It was a great experience."

Now at a firm that does grants for cities and Universities Johnson is working in Washington D.C.

The Bae B. Gardner Internship for Public Policy was established in 1990 to honor the former Hinckley Institute assistant director. Past interns have contributed over $10,000 toward the internship endowment fund.

The endowment was greatly increased through a generous bequest from Jonathan L. and Janice P. Reid.

“Ben D. Wood Internship Awarded to Cottle”

Stephanie Cottle

Stephanie Cottle was awarded the Ben D. Wood internship to the Heritage Foundation and spent winter and spring quarters 1994 in Washington D.C.

Cottle worked as a staff assistant to the President of the Heritage Foundation. She performed office duties, reviewed books for the President and worked with the Mont Pereirn Society, an economic policy group.

"I had the opportunity to learn a lot and to meet the policy analysts at the Foundation. It helped me define what I believe in. It was also good to learn about the conservative women that are out there and the things they accomplish," says Cottle.

Cottle spent time volunteering on the Mike Leavitt for Governor campaign and also is active in the Utah Leadership Council.

“It was also good to learn about the conservative women that are out there and the things they accomplish.”

After graduating in June 1995, Cottle wants to work in publications and with telecommunications issues.

The Ben D. Wood Memorial Endowment supports and recognizes outstanding students serving public policy internships in Washington D.C. Funding was provided through a major grant from Wood, a longtime friend of Robert H. Hinckley with IBM matching funds.

“Rocco C. Siciliano Internships Awarded to 5 U. Students”

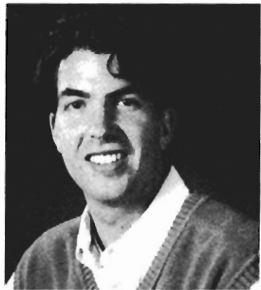

Jennifer Woodward

Romney Williams

Steve Aase

Darrin Gunnell

Cori Petsche

The Rocco C. Siciliano internships went to Jennifer Woodward, Romney Williams, Steve Aase, Darrin Gunnell and Cori Petsche.

Jennifer Woodward and Romney Williams both worked for the Senate Republican Conference Committee, a committee that is set up to help Republican Senators, particularly on media issues.

Woodward worked in the graphics art department, doing charts and graphs for the Senate floor. “Press secretaries would bring a work up sheet and I would put them together. Graphics make such a difference, I really enjoyed the department,” says Woodward.

Living in Washington D.C. was wonderful and “I loved seeing the White House. Meeting President Clinton was my most enjoyable experience,” says Woodward.

Woodward is planning on graduating in art and is currently home with the baby she had just one week after her internship ended.

Williams worked for the Senate Republican Conference in their television and radio departments. He rotated between the two departments each week and worked either on site or in the studio. “I thought it was very interesting to see the Senators in action and how the Senator’s staff worked. In some offices, the staffers had a lot of influence.”

“I learned a lot about how interpersonal relations work on a national level, with the blending of each state being represented. It was interesting to learn how each Senator saw their role.”

After graduation, Williams is planning on earning his MBA going into international business.

Steve Aase served his internship at the Supreme Court. He gave tours and lectures and worked as a photo assistant. As a photo assistant his job was to work with publishers and authors to decide whether or not their requests for photos were valid. He also assisted on the final preparations for the World War II exhibit.

“Working at the Court was really rewarding,” says Aase. “Working as a public liaison, I really felt a part of the Court. Many people have misconceptions about the Court and I got to inform the public about the functions and power of the Court.”

Aase is planning on attending law school and studying media law.

Darrin Gunnell’s internship was at Global Village Communications, an international television and film production company.

While at Global Village Communications, Gunnell worked as an assistant to the Executive Producer for Studio Operations and also as Productions Assistant for documentary video production, typically relating to international issues.

“This internship opened doors for me in terms of this type of business. It gave me a chance to see the professionalism and learn about the political side of business technology.”

Gunnell is earning his International Relations certificate and plans to attend graduate school in diplomacy and international relations.

Cori Petsche served her internship at The U.S. Conference of Mayors, working with the Director of Technical Assistance. Petsche worked on the most liveable city program and did research on the entertainment industries work with at risk youth.

“I learned about how the national government works with the local government. We lobbied for the local mayors and it was very interesting to see that interaction.”

Petsche is thinking about law school and working as a government lawyer.

The Siciliano internship was set up to honor Rocco C. Siciliano by the ARA Services, Inc. Siciliano is a University of Utah graduate and Distinguished Alumnus Award recipient. His public service career includes a stint as President Eisenhower’s special assistant for personnel management and as undersecretary of commerce and assistant secretary of labor. He served on the Federal Pay Board from 1971-1973.

In the past years, Siciliano has personally provided additional internship funding. The internship is given to outstanding students serving public policy internships.

“Torgersen Awarded Bill Rishel Memorial Internship”

Jay Torgersen

The Bill Rishel Intern for 1993-94 went to Jay Torgersen. He served an internship to Simon and Company during Summer 1994. Simon and Company is a intergovernmental relations firm who’s clients are mainly Mayor’s offices in mid-size cities.

“I caught on by jumping in and learning.”

Torgersen worked mainly on the Hill, tracking legislation, listening to debates and attending hearings. “I was able to work with crime related issues, including the Crime Bill,” says Torgersen. He also worked on other municipal related issues such as the EPA Superfund and highway legislation.

“This internship taught me about the way government runs and the processes that take place. There was so much to do and see,” says Torgersen. “I caught on by jumping in and learning.”

Torgersen is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and is involved with the Bennion Center and ASUU. After graduation, he wants to work in public service areas relating to sociology and criminology.

The Bill Rishel Memorial Fund was set up by Virginia Rishel to honor her father.

“Scott M. Matheson Leadership Forum Scholarship Awarded”

Wendy Evans and Amanda Williams each received a $3500 Scott M. Matheson Leadership Forum Scholarship.

Evans, an English and Political Science major was the youngest Clinton delegate at the 1992 Democratic convention. She interned locally with the Utah State Democratic headquarters in 1993 and in Washington DC with Congressman Wayne Owens in the Summer of 1992. She has been involved at the University of Utah through ASUU, the Hinckley Institute of Politics SAC, the Bennion Center and the Greek system.

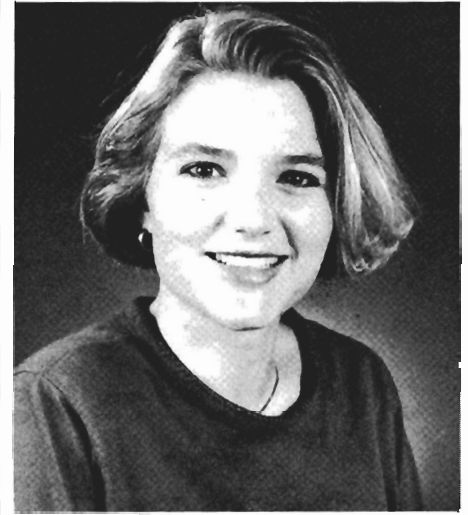

Evans has a special desire to help women and children deal with the difficult issues they must face. She says, “I am interested in the different aspects that women bring to government and issues that effect women within our society.” She plans to attend law school, possibly in family law. After law school Evans says, “I would like to work for an agency that focuses on women and children, possibly with domestic violence or the economically disadvantaged.”

This scholarship means a lot to Evans because “It will allow me to participate in the issues I care about. It is particularly special because it is named after Governor Scott Matheson. He wasn’t preoccupied with power he just loved to serve his state. His enthusiasm made an impression on the entire nation about the nature of a leader. To him politics was people, and that is what makes a true leader.”

Williams is a political science and economics major who has served as an intern in the Utah Legislature as well as at the United States Supreme Court. She has served her community through her church and the university by acting as a resident advisor.

Wendy Evans

Williams is planning on attending law school “Because I like the law as it relates to other aspects of life I am interested in, for example, social work and politics. I want to put my degree to practical use. Another area I am interested in is constitutional law because of the impact it has on future generations.”

Leadership is not only important in politics, says Williams. “Leaders can come from any sector of society. What defines a leader is honesty, willingness to change, a belief in people and the ability to earn respect. The Matheson’s are truly leaders and an example through their public service and the way they live their lives as citizens. It was an honor to be chosen by them.”

The Matheson Leadership Forum was established in honor of the late governor, with the goal of enabling former elected officials to reflect, write and speak about their experiences once they have left office. It has since broadened to offer scholarships to encourage students toward public service and extraordinary leadership in the tradition of Scott M. Matheson.

“Robert H. Hinckley, Jr. Environmental Quality Internship goes to Finance Senior Matt Oldroyd”

Matt Oldroyd

Finance Senior Matt Oldroyd was named the Robert H. Hinckley, Jr. Environmental Intern and served at the Composting Council in Washington D.C.

“I helped put together a data base for the Composting Council that will have information about composting facilities from all over the country. It will include what they are doing and where they are located, along with other information,” says Oldroyd. “I also had the opportunity to help prepare for the national convention that the council put on.”

Oldroyd says that he “Discovered the functions of a trade union and it’s impact on an industry. The Composting Council gave me a lot of opportunities to be involved and it really helped me to feel a part of the organization. It was a great experience.”

Oldroyd, who has been involved at the University through ASUU and LDSSA

“The Composting Council gave me a lot of opportunities to be involved and it really helped me to feel a part of the organization. It was a great experience.”

is planning on going on to graduate school, possibly in a joint JD and MBA program.

The Robert H. Hinckley, Jr. Environmental Internship was set up by James Hinckley to honor his father.
