Looking Forward to the New Millennium: The Hinckley Institute Will Continue Its Tradition of Involving Students in Politics

By Ted Wilson

For over a year, the Hinckley Institute of Politics has been on the semester system. In spite of the tremendous re-organization necessitated by the changes, the new schedule has had a positive effect on the institute’s internship program. Interns now serve a 15-week internship, one-third longer than before. Washington, D.C. intern hosts, such as the Supreme Court and the White House are delighted with the shift. Interns report they receive much greater education and impact than the 1/3 additional time might suggest.

Other changes have come the institute’s way. Robert H. Hinckley, Jr. has retired as the chair of the Governing Board. Mr. Hinckley will remain on the board and active on the Hinckley Institute Investment Committee, but will turn over the key leadership position to James (Jim) Nibley, his son. The Hinckley family retains its enthusiasm and tremendous support to the institute. The financial undergirding the Hinckley’s have given the institute is essential, but the family’s active involvement has been even more important over the years. We welcome Jim Hinckley as the new “boss.”

Sam Grover Rich, University of Utah Professor Emeritus of Political Science and a popular former teacher and researcher in foreign affairs has given a very generous gift to the institute to expand the institute’s reach into politics abroad. Sam’s generosity will allow the institute to provide internships abroad, organize political service expeditions to third-world countries, bring in important speakers in foreign affairs, and provide seminars in politics in conjunction with the university’s study abroad programs. The Rich gift comes at a vital time when students of the institute are expressing even more interest in politics in a continually shrinking world.

As part of the new participation in foreign matters, the Rich grant will help the institute to sponsor this year’s Kowtow Project. The project, envisioned by Student Body President, Ben McAdams and Brett Humphrey during their trip to India last March, will send 13 students to India during the 1999-2000 holiday season, to study politics in New Delhi, build a school in Kotwara, study microcredit lending, and visit important cultural sites. The Hinckley Institute, the International Student Center, and the Bennion Center for student service jointly sponsor the project. The important link between service and politics will provide students with a rich education about the people of a foreign nation and the politics that emerge in their capital city.

The institute has again been the host sponsor of college Democrats and Republicans. There has been great energy and involvement as this year’s groups, including the institute’s student advisory committee. An opening campus social and joint fund-raising activities bring the students together as friends.

While issues (round table) discussions have provided the essential opposition on issues inherent in a democracy. Students who identify with other parties are welcome.

Last February, the Hinckley Institute celebrated the life of Robert H. Hinckley with an important biography by Fae B. Gardiner, Robert H. Hinckley Getting to Know Him. The book is available from the institute in both hard and softbound editions. This year’s Hinckley Journal of Politics editors Jill Burton and John Mayer have put together an exciting collection of student writing and research on politics. The journal is also available by calling (801) 584-4501.

As we move into the next century, the role of the Hinckley Institute in affording students the opportunity to serve internships, study abroad, attend political programs, and learn through experience will become even more important. Such experiences are essential for our students, as they complete their college education and prepare for their professional lives. They represent the future and are the people we will want to become our leaders in the next century.
Life on the Hill — Five Students Chosen as Outstanding Interns

Reuben Cowley served his internship at the Senate Majority Conference and the Republican National Conference, where he was able to meet many influential people, including the Utah delegation and Speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich. He enjoyed working in the exciting atmosphere of the D.C. area and said, "If nothing else, I obtained a greater understanding of politics in my home state, as well as at the national level, and gained a greater devotion to the principles that make this country the greatest one ever." Corbin Bowley, a senior majoring in Economics, served his internship in Senator Hatch’s Washington, D.C. office Fall Semester 1998. Bowley worked on the Senate Judiciary Committee focusing mainly on Trade and Defense issues. As an intern, he was given responsibilities that required him to work with top Finance Committee staff members, the United States Trade representatives, International Trade Committee members, and many other important international political figures. "I had the chance to work with key members of government on the hottest trade issues for four months. It was an exhilarating experience to see everything I had studied for the last three years come to life," said Bowley. He feels that this gave him the opportunity to experience the political process first hand.

While serving his internship, the Asian Economic Crisis was winding down. Bowley was able to attend seminars and listen to ideas and points of view on how to fix the global economy. "My favorite part of being an intern was having the chance to meet top economists and political figures. I even had the opportunity to meet with the Finance Minister from Thailand," commented Bowley. Three months of his internship were spent working on an Economic related project. It entailed preparing Senator Hatch for the World Economic Forum by putting together global economic data and statistics, which Hatch used in the forum. "I was excited to do this because the Senator used some of my ideas. It made me feel like I had made a substantial contribution to the Senator’s work in Washington," said Bowley. "My internship was a wonderful experience. I learned about as much in the brief four months that I was there, as I have in my entire college career."

Stewart Harman, a senior working towards a double major in Political Science and Communication, worked in Congressmen Merrill Cook’s Washington, D.C. office Fall, Semester 1998. Harman was immediately welcomed as part of the staff and given many key responsibilities, including running the front desk, answering phones, handling constituent mail, scheduling White House and other D.C. area tours, and giving Capitol tours. Harman worked in Congressmen Cook’s office during his re-election campaign and was also given the opportunity to travel back to Salt Lake City and help with the campaign for two weeks before Cook’s reelection. "I worked with some of the most competent staffers on Capitol Hill," said Harman. "They helped me jump right in and get involved in running Congressman Cook’s office."

Some highlights of Harman’s Washington, D.C. experience include attending fundraising dinners, receptions, and meetings with the Congressman, as well as meeting Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich and Secretary of Defense William Cohen. "All of these experiences were wonderful," Harman said. "But the biggest highlight was just being able to learn about politics from somewhere other than a textbook; to experience politics first hand and to learn more about how our country was founded and is run today." I am grateful to the Hinckley Institute and Congressman Cook's Staff for giving me this experience.

Stephanie Paulus worked in Senator Bennett's office during Summer Semester 1999, at the completion of her undergraduate work in Political Science and Psychology. Senator Bennett's office gave Paulus substantive responsibilities, including tracking legislation, conducting research, writing issue briefs, and responding to constituent letters. She worked with one of Senator Bennett's senior policy advisors, who had a vast knowledge of the legislative process and extensive experience in the issues she focused on. "It is impressive to me that everyone I worked with wanted me to have an ideal experience and provided me with opportunities to understand the political process and the specific areas that I was interested in," said Paulus.

She feels that Senator Bennett's office has the attitude that they are lucky to have interns working there. Senator Bennett takes the time to meet with each intern and share his political ideology with them. Paulus says, "Representing his ideals increased my respect for him in an individual and as a leader of our nation. I am appreciative for the opportunities that the Hicklkey Institute provides in Washington, D.C. and in Utah. My internship was an incredible experience that I will always treasure."

Tiffany Walke was chosen to intern in Congressman James V. Hansen's office, representative of Utah's first district, Spring Semester 1999. Of her experience, Walke says, "Serving an internship in Washington, D.C. for Congressman Hansen has been one of the best things I have ever done to expand my horizons for myself and for my education." While interning for Congressman Hansen, she handled basic office duties, researched constituent mail responses, letter writing, attended briefings for legislative assistants and gave tours of the United States Capitol building. "Congressman Hansen's staff was very professional, hardworking and treated me as one of the team," said Walke.

While in Washington, she was able to see the events of history taking place. In January 1999, President Clinton's impeachment trial was in full swing. During a session of the House Managers presenting their case, Walke was given a ticket to the Senate proceedings of the President's impeachment trial. "It was amazing to be in this tightly packed room of people, watching history unfold before my eyes." She feels her internship helped her gain greater knowledge and insight into the workings of politics, as well as to the History of our nation. Walke feels indebted to the many courageous individuals who fought to preserve this nation, as well as to Robert H. Hinckley, founder of the Hinckley Institute of Politics. "Without the generosity and vision of this great man, I would not have been given the opportunity to serve an internship in Washington, D.C.""Serving an internship for Congressman Hansen's office was a beneficial and enlightening experience for Walke. "Working in Congressman Hansen's office gave me hope for our nation and politics in general, upon seeing his diligent efforts and dedication to the people of Utah."

Emily Macdonald was chosen as the R.J. Snow Public Policy Intern

Emily Macdonald served her internship Summer Semester 1999 at the Committee for Education Funding. The Committee is a nonprofit, nonpartisan coalition of national education organizations. They disseminate information concerning national education issues to member organizations and organize lobbying efforts supporting increase in funding for national education programs.

Macdonald's job responsibilities at the committee involved her in a variety of everyday tasks along with numerous special projects. Her regular responsibilities included attending hearings, gathering newspaper articles, compiling information for members, and preparing handouts for meetings. She also tracked ticket sales to the committee's annual Awards Gala and participated in a rally.

Macdonald was given the opportunity to help with the creation of the committee's website and to work on a project where she wrote a summary about the impact a 12% cut in funding would have on major education programs. "I enjoyed interacting with the staff and attending hearings. I learned a lot and got to do a variety of things," said Macdonald.

"I particularly enjoyed the opportunity to attend meetings at the Department of Education and the special forum for higher education at the Brookings Institute."

The R.J. Snow Internship was established in 1986 by former Hinckley interns to honor 2r. Snow, Director of the Hinckley Institute of Politics from 1972 to 1985.
Steve Burton Named Margaret Rampton Munk Public Policy Intern

Steve Burton was named as the Margaret Rampton Munk Public Policy Intern for his service in Governor Michael O. Leavitt’s office Fall Semester 1999. Burton was assigned to the Deputy of Education Office, working under Fran Stoltz, and also to the Electrics staff. He enjoyed his internship experience and the people he worked with. “It was a wonderful experience,” said Burton. “The office was very friendly and worked to ensure that my internship would be a positive experience.”

Burton was able to participate in a variety of projects throughout his internship. He worked on the Governor’s ‘Share the Gift of Knowledge’ state wide book drive, with volunteers and sponsors throughout the state, on various election issues that were brought up in the last election, and began preparations for up coming elections.

“I learned a great deal while interning for Governor Leavitt,” said Burton. “I was able to see how the administration is organized, how policy is made, the great importance that is placed on constituent affairs, and the high level of professionalism that is evident in everything that takes place. This internship was one of the highlights of my education.”

The Margaret Rampton Munk Public Policy Internship is for students serving in the Governor’s Office. It was established in 1995 through a generous donation by former Utah Governor Calvin Rampton and former First Lady Lucylbeth Rampton. The bequest is in honor of their late daughter “Meg.”

Jeffrey Merchant

Jeffrey Merchant Selected as the Ben D. Wood Intern

University of Utah Junior Jeff Merchant was awarded the Ben D. Wood Internship for his work with the Heritage Foundation during Summer Semester 1999. In the President’s Office, Jeff was able to work with some of the country’s most innovative thinkers on public policy issues.

Merchant has always enjoyed the political process and his experience at the Heritage Foundation gave him new insight on how ideas actually become policy. His understanding of American political issues broadened greatly because of his internship especially as he attended lectures and forums on religion and society, the flat tax, and national security. Merchant was able to meet many of the key players that shape public policy. Among former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert, and Associate Justice Clarence Thomas. Merchant is a Political Science and Asian Studies major, minoring in Economics. Upon graduating, he plans to attend law school.

The Ben D. Wood Endowment was established in 1984 to recognize outstanding students serving policy internships in Washington, D.C. Funding was provided through a grant from Wood, a long-time friend of Robert H. Hinckley, with matching funds donated from IBM. Wood dedicated much of his career to education, serving for twenty-five years as director of the Bureau of Education Research. He also served with Mr. Hinckley as a member of President Franklin D. Roosevelt’s administration.

Christensen Chosen as Moss Intern

Tiffini Christensen has been named as the Frank E. Moss Intern for her work at the Caring Institute, Fall Semester 1998. Christensen is a Math and Computer Science major and is currently serving a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The Caring Institute is a non-profit organization founded in 1985 to honor and promote the values of caring, integrity, and public service. Inspired by the example of Mother Teresa, the Institute believes that the solution to most problems is the caring of one human being for another. While interning at the Caring Institute, Christensen was able to participate in the Caring Awards where eleven Americans, one international awardee, and five young adults were honored for their long-standing commitments to caring. Christensen had the opportunity to act as the Press Assistant for the awards program.

As an intern, she corresponded with donors and schools that were involved with the program and coordinated the judging of contestants for the awards. She also helped maintain and update the Institute’s data base. “I enjoyed working with the fine staff at the Institute and with those honored at the Caring Awards. The Institute is a wonderful organization,” said Christensen.

The Frank E. Moss Internship on Caring is named after the former Senator who served Utah for eighteen years. The internships purpose is to steer students toward working with social institutions that help those with special needs. The original endowment was set up by Kem and Carolyn Gardner to honor Senator Moss.

James Hyde Selected as Bill Rishel Memorial Intern

James Hyde, a Business Marketing and Economic major, served his internship Summer Semester 1999 at Pal-Tech. Pal-Tech is a business consulting and management firm that specializes in the contractual needs of government agencies. Working under the direct supervision of Pal-Tech CEO, Omar Kadar and his associates, Hyde was given valuable professional experience. “It opened my eyes to the world of government and private enterprise business compatibility,” said Hyde.

He was given various assignments that ranged from conducting market segment analysis and providing strategic planning recommendations to recruiting legal advisors for a government funded judicial systems project in Palestine. He was responsible for generating extensive political and industrial data by conducting research directly for the CEO and director of business development. “Pal-Tech’s management structure empowered me with a great deal of autonomy and decision making opportunities,” said Hyde. He also had the opportunity to serve as the firm’s point of contact to various professional and government officials.

“Interning at Pal-Tech was an extremely rewarding experience for me. My supervisors and co-workers provided me the opportunity to gain relevant and applicable business and political knowledge, knowledge that has shaped and improved my personal character and professional career.”

The Bill Rishel Memorial Fund was established by Virginia Rishel to honor her father. It is intended to provide loans and internships to students involved in public service.

Jennifer Lynn Robinson Receives Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Graduate Study Award

The Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Graduate Study Award for 1999 has been given to Jennifer Robinson, a Masters of Public Administration student. Robinson is a graduate of the University of Utah with a B.S. in Political Science and is continuing her masters studies, emphasizing on Environmental Policy.

She credits the Hinckley Institute as being a catalyst for her personal involvement in politics. “The Institute has always supported my interests in politics and through our combined efforts, I have been able to work at all levels of government—from local campaigns all the way to the White House,” said Robinson, “The leadership and dedication the Hinckley family brings to our campus is unmatched. We are quite fortunate to have the Hinckley Institute at the University of Utah.”

Robinson firmly believes that her involvement in politics is a key component in bringing positive change to her community. She is honored to receive this study award, named in memory of Mrs. Hinckley, an individual who was committed to improving the community in which she lived. “I would especially like to thank the many women role models whom I have had the opportunity to work beside over the past several years. You have given me more support and encouragement than you will ever realize.”
Wayne Horiuchi White House Internship Awarded to Kelli Stewart

Kelli Stewart served as an intern in the Office of National AIDS Policy at the White House, Fall Semester 1998. The office was established to act as a liaison between public interest groups and the government. It advises the President on policy development for issues related to HIV and AIDS, maintains funding for continuous research, and establishes awareness of the growing epidemic. Stewart worked closely with the President’s Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS known as PACHA. As part of her responsibilities, she set up and attended weekly conference calls with various subcommittees of the Advisory Council to discuss policy development. She prepared briefing packets for council members and helped organize the 11th annual PACHA meeting, held at the Madison Hotel in Washington, D.C. Stewart also had the opportunity to attend speeches and press conferences given by members of the Executive Office.

“Working at the White House was an incredible experience,” says Stewart. “It was so interesting to see how the internal structure of the government works and to get hands on experience. Everyone should take the opportunity to intern in D.C. I learned so much and have the most wonderful memories.”

The Wayne Horiuchi White House Internship was established in 1992 to recognize the outstanding Hinkley White House interns from the several who serve in the White House each year. Wayne Horiuchi is a former Hinkley Intern who has been active in Utah politics. He has had a close relationship with the White House over the years and donated the funds to the Hinkley Institute to acknowledge the top intern for their efforts.

Governor Simon Bamberger Internship in State Policy Awarded

John Norman, Jr. graduated from the University of Utah with a Bachelor of Science in Political Science Summer Semester 1999, and is now attending Law School at the University of Utah.

As the Hinkley Institute of Politics Legislative intern Coordinator, Norman helped arrange guest speakers for the 1999 Utah State Legislative Preparation Class and assisted in grading and assigning interns to their respective legislators. Throughout the 1999 Legislative session, he advised the interns and helped them with occasional problems. I loved being involved with the legislative process,” said Norman. “Being a Hinkley Intern and consequently an integral part of the legislative process, affords any student the possibility to learn more intimate and practical knowledge than they can ever gain in the classroom. Every student should be an intern.”

Norman was an intern for lobbyist Doug Froady in 1998 and then worked for him again in 1999. Of that experience he says, “It was the most gratifying and educational experience of my life. I will use the practical knowledge that I gained for the rest of my life. I will always love the legislative process and respect those that represent us on Capitol Hill.”

The Governor Simon Bamberger Internship in State Policy is funded through a grant from the Herbert I. and Elsa B. Michael Foundation, a longtime benefactor of the University of Utah. Elsa Kamberger Michael is a direct descendant of Simon Bamberger, Utah’s fourth governor, 1914-1920.

Alyson Carter Selected to be Bae B. Gardner Intern

Alyson Carter, a Political Science major, was named this year’s Bae B. Gardner Public Policy Intern. Carter served her internship for the Department of the Treasury, Office of the Curator, Summer Semester 1999. She was responsible for coordinating public and private tours of the Treasury Building and creating a web page about the Treasury Atrium Building.

Carter learned a lot about the history of the Treasury Department and the building itself. “As a history minor, I found the large photo database that the Treasury maintains fascinating,” said Carter. “The people I got to work with were great and they always went out of their way to let me know about the activities going on in the D.C. area. I loved working there.”

The Bae B. Gardner Internship for Public Policy was established in 1990 to honor the memory of Bae B. Gardner, the assistant director. Past interns have contributed over $7,000 toward the endowment fund.
At eleven o’clock in the morning, the staff of Nightline convenes in the conference room to discuss the night’s broadcast. This is not extraordinary in itself, but there are some news events that make it quite interesting. “How about the impeachment and Senate trial to convict and remove the President?” suggests one person. “Or, the beginning and end of the war in Kosovo?” says another. “Maybe something about the mass shooting that has rocked the very foundations of this country?” someone else suggests.

“One of the most valuable experiences of my internship was sitting in on these morning conferences. Listening to some of the best in broadcast journalism discussing journalism ethics, what angle to take, and who Ted Koppel should interview for the evening program,” says Matt Canham. He is a political science major and writer for The Daily Utah Chronicle. “I spent eight months in Washington, D.C. working with the staff of ABC News Nightline. The first four months I worked for the entire staff. I screened tapes, picked shots to be used in the program, observed in the edit and control rooms, and tagged along on multiple interviews.”

In May, Canham was hired on to be a production coordinator for Nightline’s primetime Brave New World series. Brave New World told science stories through art and humor. His responsibilities were to organize the materials, screen tapes, make clip reels, help on the set and co-design the web page. He was even flown to New York a couple of times to help on interviews. He worked on an interview with world renowned Physicist Brian Green, and helped film a music video with the rock band They Might Be Giants.

Some of the highlights of Canham’s internship were seeing the President speak, following Sam Donaldson around the White House, and spending time with Ted Koppel at the Nightline retreat. “When I wasn’t working, I was out sight-seeing, either in D.C. or the surrounding areas,” said Canham. “I took weekend trips to New York, Annapolis, Baltimore, and Gettysburg. My roommates and I even drove down to New Orleans for Mardi Gras!”

The William H. Lawrence Internship provides students with a political/con- communication emphasis the opportunity to spend a semester in Washington, D.C. at the ABC News Bureau. The internship was established in honor of William Lawrence, a political reporter for ABC. Lawrence was a close friend of Robert H. Hinckley — Mr. Hinckley was one of the founders and first Vice Presidents of ABC.

Janice S. Hinckley Internship on the Environment Awarded to Jim Hinckley, Jr.

Jim Hinckley, Jr. served his internship at the Bureau of Land Management Fall Semester 1998. As an intern, he worked with the Rangeland Management group, the Grazing Permit Renewal Team, and the Wild Horse and Burro group. The Grazing Permit Renewal Team devised a plan for renewing a large number of grazing permits in a short time period that would be in compliance with environmental standards set, in part, by a recent court case. He helped the GPR team with communication and technical aspects of the project and traveled to a meeting in Denver with them.

The Wild Horse and Burro Advisory Board is a non-government group selected for their expertise regarding wild horses and rangeland. They make policy recommendations to the Wild Horse and Burro program directors. In November, while working with the Advisory Board, Hinckley attended a meeting in Phoenix. Regarding the meet- ing, Hinckley said, “it was a public meeting with a public comment period, and an interesting glimpse of how interest groups shape public policy.”

Hinckley also worked on a Service Fee survey project. The project reviewed the costs of transferring grazing permits from one holder to another. He designed a reporting form, which the field offices filled out and sent back to him. At the end of the semester Hinckley compiled the information, reviewed it, and made recommendations to help improve the consistency of the data and better the project.

The Janice S. Hinckley Public Policy Internship on the Environment was established in 1992 through a generous endowment contribution from Jim and Lyn Hinckley, to honor their mother. The environment has always been a great love and concern to Janice Hinckley, and this internship’s purpose is to assist interns who serve the environment.
Russell Hymas

Russell Hymas was named as the Paul A. Porter intern for his work Fall Semester 1998 with the Senate Republican Conference. Hymas served as the SRC’s administrative intern, where he helped coordinate radio and video shows done by Senators, set up luncheons and meetings, with Senators and their chiefs of staff, corresponded with constituents, and updated the media database. In early November, the SRC’s staff director assisted him to the private sector and Hymas was given the opportunity to take her place, assisting the staff director in various capacities.

“The experience was unforgettable,” said Hymas. “I was fortunate to be in Washington, D.C. during such a crucial time in our nation’s history. It was incredible to have a front seat during the impeachment trials and watch history unfold before my eyes.” Hymas believes his experience has given him direction in his scholastic plans as well as career goals. He will graduate from the University of Utah in the Spring of 2000 with a degree in Political Science and plans on attending Law School thereafter. Eventually, he would like to return to Washington, D.C. and work on Capitol Hill.

The Paul A. Porter Internship was established in 1975 in honor of Mr. Porter, a prominent Washington, D.C. attorney and former Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. The fund was endowed by friends and business associates of Porter, because of his longstanding friendship with Robert H. Hinckley and his interest in developing political interest among students.

George S. Eccles Internship in Business Policy Awarded to Lori Soares Hacking

Lori Soares Hacking was selected as the George S. Eccles Intern in Business Policy for the work she did at Mendez England and Associates, Fall Semester 1998. While working for the public administration group in Chevy Chase, MD, Hacking was involved in many aspects of the company. Her time was split between administrative duties and working with the Food for Peace office of the United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

Her administrative duties included assisting in the preparation of proposals for contracts with the federal government, providing support at meetings, and helping the accounting department develop a new filing system for old employee records. Soares also assisted in the preparation of a course for individuals currently working on the Food for Peace project in various countries around the world. The project allocates funds and resources to private volunteer organizations such as AIFare and The American Red Cross.

"Working with Mendez England allowed me the invaluable opportunity for learning and an experience that I would never have been able to acquire in the classroom. I was able to participate in a variety of projects dedicated to the advancement of humanitarian efforts around the world," said Hacking. The George S. Eccles Internship in Business Policy is funded through a grant from the George S. and Dolores D. Eccles Foundation. The internship brings Eccles distinguished career in Utah business. Interns are exposed to policy making processes affecting business and business regulation at both the state and national level. Eccles was a longtime friend and associate of Robert H. Hinckley, who served for many years as a director of First Security Corporation.

Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Graduate Scholarships Awarded to Helen Langan & Jean Ashby

The Abrelia Clarissa Hinckley Graduate Scholarship was established by Robert H. Hinckley in 1975 as a memorial to his wife, who strongly encouraged him to found the Hinckley Institute of Politics. The Scholarship is awarded to graduate students whose interests, formal training, and life goals include a commitment to politics and community service — ideals that guided Mrs. Hinckley’s life.

Helen Langan is pursuing a degree in the Masters of Public Administration Program at the University of Utah. During Spring Semester, Langan served an internship in the Scheduling and Advance Office of the White House. This office arranges the President’s schedule, domestic and international travel, and each event he attends away from the White House. Langan assisted with the details related to advancing the press coverage of the President. Her duties included writing press schedules, distributing press credentials, and providing support at press conferences, events, and state dinners. Langan believes that, “There couldn’t have been a better way of learning about the political process than seeing it unfold on a daily basis. I am grateful to the Hinckley Institute of Politics for affording me the opportunity to witness, from the inside of the White House, all of the historical events that were being played out while I was there.”

Langan has worked on various political campaigns at the state and local level, and she also directed her own successful campaign in 1994 at Westminster College, where she became Student Body President.

Langan says that, “Since the establishment of this scholarship, women have made great strides in politics, especially at the national level, but in Utah we still have challenges to meet in order to gain parity. When that happens, it will be, at least in part, because of the vision and commitment of Mrs. Hinckley and the Hinckley family.”

Jean Ashby is pursuing a Masters of Public Health degree at the University of Utah. Besides being a full-time Masters student, Ashby is a single mother of 4 children: Krista 15, Jill 11, Beth 9 and Mark 6, and an Administrator in Training at Christus St. Joseph Villa.

Ashby has been involved in local politics for over 10 years and is passionate about the importance of individual citizen involvement in the community. Politics is a family activity at the Ashby home. They have been involved in many political campaigns, and even the children are seasoned flyer runners and stamp lickers.

Ashby is honored to receive a scholarship devoted to community and political involvement, saying “Mrs. Hinckley is an amazing example to citizen participation in politics and the community, and to receive a scholarship named in her honor is especially gratifying. I would like to thank the Hinckley Institute of Politics for providing support and encouragement to students committed to continuing Mrs. Hinckley’s legacy.”

Anne H. & John S. Hinckley Scholarship Awarded to Monica K. Shelton

Monica K. Shelton has been awarded the 1999 Anne H. and John S. Hinckley Scholarship. Shelton is a junior at the University of Utah majoring in Political Science and Sociology. Her academic focus reflects her desire to address social problems through community involvement and political participation.

She has a passion for community service and believes that, “Politics can offer a forum for positive change to occur if citizens get involved in their communities.” Shelton has had many opportunities to serve her community. She is employed with a local law firm, has volunteered with high school speech debate programs and has worked with the Benson Center on the Mayor’s Youth Volunteer Council. Some of her most fulfilling work has been as a community education volunteer with the Utah AIDS Foundation and numerous grass root political campaigns. She plans to continue her commitment to public service by seeking a law degree and a pursuing a career in social work. “I am thankful to the Hinckley Institute of Politics, for their dedication to academics and public service, and for challenging others to become involved in their communities,” says Shelton.

The Anne H. and John S. Hinckley Scholarship was established by Anne Hinckley to honor her late husband, a leader in Utah politics. The scholarship is awarded to undergraduate students who display excellent scholarship and intent to serve the public through political involvement.
Six Students Chosen as Rocco C. Siciliano Public Policy Interns

Six outstanding Hinckley interns have been selected as Rocco C. Siciliano Interns: Alisa Graham, Tonia Hashimoto, Tracy Hawker, Joseph Pugsley, James Seaman, and Brian Wood. The Siciliano Internship was set up by ARA Services, Inc. to honor Rocco C. Siciliano. Siciliano is a University of Utah alumni and recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award. His public service career includes a stint as President Eisenhower’s Special Assistant for Personnel Management, Secretary of Commerce, and Assistant Secretary of Labor. He also served on the Federal Pay Board from 1971 to 1973.

Tracy Hawker
Washington, and made lasting friendships. If I could do it over again, I wouldn’t change a thing.

Tracy Hawker served her internship at Gctal Village Communications, Spring Semester 1999. GVC is an international video production company with projects in Puerto Rico, Iceland, South Africa, and New Zealand. As an intern, she was given countless opportunities to research and learn about other cultures, which she feels will benefit her as she continues her studies in Political Science and International Relations.

Hawker says some of her greatest moments as an intern were interviewing members of Congress, foreign statesmen, and other national dignitaries. She also worked with private companies to produce documentaries, television shows, and commercials. In this capacity, she was able to travel to places in D.C., Virginia, and Maryland for on-site production.

One of her favorite memories was filling in as a professional voice-over for an African Magazine television show. "Hawker says some of her greatest moments as an intern were interviewing members of Congress, foreign statesmen, and other national dignitaries.

"When the show was edited, the audio portion also had to be redone," said Hawker, "I was asked by the producer to record some lines to be replaced in the show. So, I was trained to speak as a European." During her internship, Hawker also learned how to edit, run audio, and manipulate a broad array of state-of-the-art production equipment, while at the same time experiencing life in Washington, D.C. "I will never forget my experiences during my internship in Washington, or the incredible people I met there."

Joseph Pugsley, a student of Economics at the University of Utah, interned Fall Semester 1998 at Medical Care Development International. Working at MCID was a unique and valuable experience for Pugsley, since he was working in a field that he was not previously familiar with. MCID is a non-profit organization that works almost exclusively on medical related projects overseas. Funding comes from groups such as the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) and The World Bank. Pugsley found his internship to be extremely interesting, working in a professional environment and learning the goals of the organization and how it operates.

Some of Pugsley’s responsibilities at MCID included, translation of materials to and from Spanish, Internet research, preparing materials to be sent overseas for use by on-site personnel, and assisting MCID employees in preparing proposals and other projects.

"I really enjoyed the experience of living on the East Coast and the opportunity to visit places that I have never been before," said Pugsley. "I traveled as far north as Boston and as far south as Virginia Beach, and all the places in between. My internship was a great experience and I made new friendships that will last a lifetime."

James Seaman served his internship at The Mitchell Group, Summer Semester 1999. "I had an incredible experience at Tonia Hashimoto
Tonia Hashimoto worked for Marcus G. Faust, a lobbyist for companies in Utah, New Mexico, California, and Nevada. She learned about the importance of lobbying and gained hands on experience. Her job was versatile, ranging from sending faxes and preparing invoices to attending hearings on Capitol Hill. While in D.C., Hashimoto was able to experience many things she never expected. She attended a Nevada Delegation dinner where she met Senators Harry Reid and Richard Bryan, and Congresswoman Shelley Berkley and Congressman Jim Gibbons; she went to a NATO reception, where she caught a glimpse of "glamour and fame"; and attended the impeachment trial of President Clinton. "I know I am lucky to have been able to experience so many things in our nation’s capital, especially during an exciting time in history," said Hashimoto. During the Kosovo negotiations, she was in the Nightline editing room while Tali Koppel reported from Europe on the war in the Balkans. "I learned a lot about myself while in The Mitchell Group," said Seaman. He learned about international development and how management consulting in the development industry works. Seaman was involved in recruiting consultants for contracts, working on contract proposals, and assisting in the contract development of The Mitchell Group's marketing strategy. His most exciting project was working on a Market Analysis, which identified trends in USAID budget requests in order to isolate potential areas where The Mitchell Group could win new contracts. As part of this project, he also conducted research on firms that have the potential to be competitors for the Mitchell Group graduates from its small business classification. "It was exciting and very educational to be involved in many different projects at The Mitchell Group," said Seaman.

He speaks very highly about his internship experience and the people he worked with. "The entire staff was wonderful, particularly in their diversity," said Seaman. "I was able to learn so much by working closely with the staff. Of course, I expected to complete everyday tasks reserved for interns, but they also allowed me to explore the different areas of international development which interested me. This allowed me to capitalize on my intern experience by learning a lot and gaining tremendous practical experience."

Bryan Wood, a senior studying Communication, served as an intern for the Supreme Court of the United States during Fall Semester 1998. He is still captivated by his experience at the Supreme Court as well as the other great opportunities he was given in Washington, D.C. "I was fascinated by the complexity of the law and the overwhelming duty that the Justices and their staff have to interpret it properly," said Wood. Some of his responsibilities at the Court included conducting public lectures on a daily basis and giving private tours to guests of the Justices and other guests of the Court.

Wood had the opportunity to sit in and listen to meetings with justices and other leaders from various countries, where they talked about their respective systems of government. "It was truly a unique experience, to be in Washington for a semester. I gained a different perspective on how our government functions as well as a greater respect for our country," said Wood. "My internship was both educational and fun. It will definitely be a highlight of my college experience."

Alissa Graham, a senior majoring in Political Science and Environmental Studies, interned with Simon and Company, Inc. Summer Semester 1999. Simon and Company represents a number of city governments and public authorities in Washington, D.C., actively working with Congress, Federal Agencies, and the Executive branch. Graham enjoyed her internship experience, especially the people she worked with at Simon and Company. She performed a variety of duties and was responsible for attending hearings and other legislative activities in Congress, after which she followed up with the firms' staff both orally and in writing. She drafted memorandums on grant opportunities, performed administrative duties, and provided general office support.

"My experience in D.C. was outstanding and informative," said Graham. "It taught me how private companies help cities get funding for economic redevelopment from the federal government. My internship was the best experience I've ever had!"
This year’s 1999 Spring Break in Washington, D.C. gave nine University of Utah students a full week of stimulating meetings with prominent political figures and the opportunity to explore many historic places. The experience reflected what Mr. Hinckley had hoped for all students who became involved with the Hinckley Institute — to participate in government and help make it work for and serve its citizens.

Students attended oral arguments at the U.S. Supreme Court and met with two of Associate Justice Stephen Breuer Law Clerks. They toured the United States Capitol and the White House and were able to speak with all five members of Utah’s U.S. Congressional Delegation. They interviewed White House Special Assistant Mickey Ibarra, and talked with Director of Government Relations for the National Education Association, Jon Bernstein. The students were given tours of C-Span and National Public Radio headquarters, and engaged in a stimulating question-and-answer session with investigative reporter and columnist, Jack Anderson.

Spring Week offered students the opportunity to tour many places rich in history. They were also taken on tours of the Treasury Building, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Museum of Broadcast News, Gettysburg, and the Pentagon. General Brent Scowcroft, former National Security Director for Presidents Ford and Bush, met with the Hinckley group in his office not far from the White House. He answered questions concerning U.S. foreign policy and highlighted his concern about the problems in Asia, the Middle East, and Europe.

This Year’s participants saw famous places, talked with important people, and were inspired to become involved in future public policy making. The Institute looks forward to the upcoming new century and continuing the Spring Week in Washington program, which offers students the opportunity to explore Washington, D.C. and participate actively in government. It is made possible by the Eccles C. Siciliano Fellowship.

Karen Shepherd Internship Fund

When former Utah Congresswoman Karen Shepherd closed down her 1994 reelection campaign, she had roughly $60,000 in her account. Rather than keep the funds for her own personal use, she set a precedent by giving it to the Utah State Democratic Caucus to be used for student internships. This fall will mark the fourth year for the program. The program recruits interns from colleges and universities along the Wasatch Front to work for Utah’s Democratic candidates and work on issues which Shepherd feels strongly about, notably campaign finance reform, gift ban legislation, and lobbying disclosure initiatives. By using the funds in this way, she is keeping faith with the original contributors to her campaign and is furthering the causes for which she is an advocate.

Since its establishment in 1996, 26 University of Utah interns have participated in the program. Interns are paid a stipend based on the length of their internship commitment. They typically work 25 to 30 hours per week and submit a written evaluation of their experience upon completion of the internship. Academic internship credit is awarded through the Hinckley Institute of Politics.

Each Spring, Shepherd returns to Utah from Louisiana to host a luncheon for the interns. This provides a wonderful opportunity for the interns, and also for students who are interested in working with Karen Shepherd in the future.

Karen Shepherd is currently working as the U.S. Executive Director for the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Eryn Caamano and Ben McAdams Receive Scott M. Matheson Leadership Forum Scholarships

The Matheson Leadership Forum was established in honor of the late Governor Matheson, with the goal of enabling former elected officials to reflect, write, and speak about their experiences once they leave office. The forum has since been broadened to offer scholarships to students and encourage them toward public service and extraordinary leadership in the tradition of Scott M. Matheson.

Eryn Caamano

Eryn Caamano is pursuing a B.A. in Biology with an emphasis on pre-med. As an undergraduate at the University of Utah, Caamano has served in students government on the Programs Board, the Service Committee, and the Mayfest Committee. In 1998, she also had the opportunity to be a student representative for UIA. Caamano is a member of Alpha Epsilon Delta and Phi Xi Sigma. Recently, she has been volunteering at the Cancer Wellness Clinic and has spent time doing research in pre-term labor and colon cancer. During the past year, Caamano volunteered at the Utah Homeless Shelter, giving TB shots and teaching health classes. She enjoys volunteering in the health field, and has also worked in the Pediatric Neurosurgery unit, the Pediatric Clinic, and the Anesthesiology Department. One of the highlights of her service was being given the opportunity to do rounds in the Pediatric Oncology unit.

After Caamano graduates from the University of Utah, she plans to continue her education by attending medical school and specializing in pediatric neurosurgery. She would like to thank the Matheson family for their kindness and support in awarding her this scholarship.

Ben McAdams

Ben McAdams is pursuing a joint degree in Electrical Engineering and Political Science. McAdams served an internship in Washington, D.C. in the White House Press Office during Spring Quarter of 1998. After his internship he continued working for the White House doing Advance work and has had the opportunity to travel with the President to various parts of the United States and abroad. He recently returned from an Advance trip to Macedonia, where he coordinated President and Mrs. Clinton’s visit to the Stenkovich I Kosovo refugee camp.

McAdams has also been involved in local Utah politics working on the Scott Leckman for U.S. Senate campaign and most recently coordinating media relations for the Utah House and Senate Democratic Caucuses. During the 1998-1999 school year, he served as President of the University of Utah College Democrats, where he sought to promote political awareness and involvement among students.

McAdams is currently serving as student body president at the University of Utah. His goals for the 1999-2000 school year include: being vocal on issues that concern students; making students voices heard; and, having student government take a serious look at the hard issues students face. McAdams is currently working on keeping gun off campus, finding affordable health insurance for students, addressing the cost and availability of housing, and getting federal financial aid funding.

"I am honored to be the recipient of such a prestigious award," said McAdams. "And would like to thank the entire Matheson family for the opportunities they provide to students at the University of Utah." McAdams will continue his education after graduating from the University of Utah in the Spring of 2000, by pursuing a degree in Law.

Twentynine elementary and secondary school teachers from throughout Utah gathered at the Hinckley Institute of Politics in June to participate in the 1999 Huntsman Seminar in Constitutional Government for Teachers. The exciting and educational eight days of political study, co-directed by Ted Wilson and Dan Jones, gave teachers a first-hand glimpse into the inner workings of politics and helped them learn how to share their knowledge with their students.

Fifty-six distinguished individuals involved in politics addressed the Huntsman teachers. Among this year’s guest speakers were: J.D. Williams, former director of the Hinckley Institute-State Republican and Democratic Chairs, Bob Bishop and Meghan Holbrook; Representatives Cheryl Allen, Michael Styer, Susan Koenig, and Paula Jalander; Attorney General Jan Graham; Governor Michael Leavitt; and Mayor DeeDee Corradini. Other participants, included: local lobbyists; Salt Lake City Mayoral candidates; political reporters; City and County officials; Utah Supreme Court and District Court Justices; local attorneys; and 2002 Olympic representatives.

The Huntsman family generously donates the funds necessary to run the program each year. Because of their support, many teachers are given the opportunity to gain a greater understanding of the Constitution of the United States and greater insight into the two-party political process. At the completion of the Huntsman Seminar, graduation ceremonies were held at Huntsman Corporation. John Huntsman, Jr., John Romney, Jake Garn, Robert H. Hinckley, Jr., and James Hinckley, addressed the teachers and presented them with their Certificates of Completion. The teachers were left with the challenge to share their knowledge with others and to become more active in the system that makes our country an example to the world.

The 1999 Huntsman Seminar was undoubtedly a tremendous success. Teachers expressed their gratitude for the opportunity to re-ignite their love for politics and the desire to teach their students about this great country. Liola Wynn, a U.S. History teacher at Mountain Ridge Junior High, said, "I can't say enough about the seminar—it was excellent. I feel rejuvenated and motivated. Professionally and personally, I am energized and want to share this experience with my students and friends." Linda Scoville, a 9th grade teacher at Valley View Elementary, agreed by saying, "It was wonderful. I learned so much and feel more informed about our political system and our Constitution." Huntsman teachers will take with them, back to the classroom, a new experience and many new ideas, which will benefit their students for many years.

A.P. History and World Civilizations teacher at Murray High School, Dana LeBaron, expressed her gratitude for being able to participate in the huntsman seminar by saying, "Thank you for treating us like professionals, for listening to our ideas and hopes. I admire your dedication and commitment to positive social change and interaction." Many teachers agreed with her. Rick Carlson, a Politics and Economics teacher at Elk Ridge Middle School, summarized his experience in one simple phrase, "This was the best educational class of my life!"

The Hinckley Journal of Politics features excellent undergraduate political essays and research papers. It offers students the opportunity to publish on the undergraduate level and provide new thought to the political process and to political issues.
